Good-Bye to Cosgrave
Good Times for Lawyers
Beauty Experts Got Her

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

JUSTICE DANIEL F. COHALAN invited great and small to luncheon yesterday with President Cosgrave of Ireland's Free State, now on his way to Ireland.

Mayor Walker hoped that Cosgrave would come back some day as president "of the Irish nation." Justice Cohalan, a really powerful American of Irish blood, hoped "to see Ireland free from the center to the sea."

MAYOR WALKER'S father and Justice Cohalan fought the home rule battle together years ago.

President Cosgrave talked of practical things, as they are. He, and good men like him in Ireland, will make a success of the Free State. They made an excellent start, giving twenty per cent of the state's income to educate Irish children.

The great water power now being developed in the River Shannon, enough to supply the whole state, will be the property of the Irish people, not the property of exploiters of the Irish people. That is something we don't do in America.

SAMUEL UNTERMYER, at the luncheon, told Otto H. Kahn, "This is the greatest time that ever was for lawyers, especially for good advocates. Any lawyer of ability can make a good income. Big lawyers that once appeared in court now sit in their offices, telling men like you what they may do and must not do." Mr. Kahn, you know, is very rich.

MR. UNTERMYER offered to bet 3 to 1 that New York's street car trust won't succeed in raising the fare from 5 to 7 cents. Still youthful, Mr. Untermyer bets recklessly. What a street car trust wants it usually gets, especially in New York.

YOU think of Cosgrave, sailing back to wonderful Ireland, on his way to resume his work among a great people. It is hard to realize that the population of Ireland is one-half the population of New York city. It's what you ARE, not how MANY you are, that counts.

AN unfortunate woman, falling into the hands of a medical "beauty specialist," was advised to have her "bow legs" straightened. While one doctor worked on the legs, sawing the bones, another, Dr. Schireson, was busy "removing a scar from her shoulder."

GANGRENE attacked the unfortunate young woman's legs. Both were amputated, and she may die. Nobody probably had noticed the poor girl's legs except herself and the man that took her money. Nothing can persuade women to be content as nature made them.

THE big fellows that regulate the price of money think it's time to put a damper on stock speculation. New York's Federal Reserve Bank raises the discount rate to 4 per cent.

But values are there. Many industries, iron, steel, automobiles, and food, show activity that Federal Reserve rates do not influence. "It hath not yet been shown what we shall be," financial and otherwise. Don't sell short.

IN 1927 this country sold to Germany goods worth $481,580,787, an increase of $117,000,000 in twelve months. We sold to Canada $835,878,000 of goods last year, a gain of nearly $100,000,000.

While business is good it doesn't matter much whether money costs ½ per cent more or less.

CLAUDE H. PRIDDY, formerly a clergyman, murdered his wife and two sons, because "I feared they had contracted my incurable disease."

The unfortunate wife, according to his testimony, turned when he struck her a glancing blow in the back and said only, "No, dear, no, no."

"Then I finished her," says he. He also said, "I sent them to heaven and I will go to hell and

CHAMBERLIN CRASHES

Danced Their Way to Jail

ROBERTA THOMPSON MARIE BRAZINSKI

Roberta Thompson, 22, of 409 McKee place, went dancing in Schenley Park at 2:30 a. m. today, police testified in Morals Court this morning when she was arraigned on a disorderly conduct charge. She and her roommate, Marie Brazinski, 19, had partaken of liquor procured in Castle Gardens cabaret, Wylie avenue, police say. A warrant was issued for the proprietors of the cabaret after the girls' "boy friend," Richard Sloan, testified he purchased the liquor. Castle Gardens is supposedly closed, having been denied a cabaret permit by Director of Public Safety James M. Clark in January.

CRACKS UP IN TRY FOR RECORD

By International News Service.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 4.—Clarence Chamberlin, the trans-Atlantic flier, was slightly injured and his Martin-Bellanca plane was wrecked on the take-off of a flight to establish a new endurance record here early today.

The big ship crashed into a ditch from a height of 50 feet.

Chamberlin's injury consisted of bruises and a burned hand. His copilot, Roger Q. Williams, emerged with scratches.

Lack of a runway long enough for the heavily loaded plane to acquire the momentum necessary to take it high into the air was said to be the cause of the accident.

Chamberlin and Williams were out to break the American endurance record of 52 hours 22 minutes and 21 seconds.

Both were confident as they hopped into the plane and started off at 7:01 a. m. The plane started down the runway, slowly, but gathering speed rapidly.

As Chamberlin neared the end of the prepared runway he "gave her the gas" and the ship rose into the air.

Suddenly the ship seemed to flatten out and, despite the frantic efforts of the famous pilot, it struck the ground heavily and then toppled over into a ditch.

Honored by Spain

DOROTHY TORREYSON

Dorothy Torreyson, 703 Braddock avenue, graduate assistant in the modern language department of the University of Pittsburgh, has been admitted to membership in the Royal Spanish-American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Cadiz, Spain, according to word received from the Royal Delegate of Arts. She is the youngest member of the academy and one of only two American women who have ever been admitted to membership.

MESSENGER HELDUP; $790 GONE

A lone, armed bandit perpetrated one of the most daring downtown holdups in recent years when he stalked a messenger on the fourteenth floor of the Oliver Building, Smithfield and Sixth avenue, at 11:25 a. m. today, took a $790 payroll from the victim.

The bandit then locked the messenger, Clarence Mathias, 35, employe of the Carter Electric Company, in a freight elevator and fled.

Detectives and police, believing the bandit was still in the building, surrounded the place.

Mathias just left the Carter company office on the same floor when he was confronted by the bandit. He was on his way to the Joseph Horne Company warehouse at Manchester Bridge, North Side, with the week's pay for Carter employes working there.

Lindy Ends San Juan Stay

By International News Service.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Feb. 4.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh ended his Porto Rican visit today, hopping off for Santo Domingo at 10:52 o'clock (local time). This was the "Lone Eagle's" twenty-sixth birthday.

Col. Lindbergh said he had greatly enjoyed his whole trip through the West Indies, especially his stay here.

"The reception I got in Porto Rico was surely 100 per cent," said the flier. "I wish I could stay longer, but I must keep my schedule. Maybe I can come back some time."

A big crowd gathered at the flying field and cheered as the Spirit of St. Louis took the air.

The flight was to be about 22 miles to the Santo Domingan capital and entailed an over-water journey of 75 miles from the western tip of Porto Rico to the eastern tip of Santo Domingo.

Girl Hit By Engine, Killed

Miss Louise McCulley, 17, of 4506 Chatsworth street, was killed last night when she was struck by a light engine on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Second avenue and Mobile street. The body was taken to the morgue.

Miss McCulley was about to cross the tracks, and it is believed the nearby cars obstructed her view of the approaching locomotive. She suffered internal injuries and a skull fracture.

UNION LEADERS TO SEEK CAMBRIA MINERS' RELIEF

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 4—Relief for the families of striking miners in Cambria county, many of whom are in destitute circumstances, will be sought by union leaders here next week. With approximately 8,000 miners on strike in this county 32,000 children are affected. Appeal will be made for clothing and food donations to be received at local fire stations.

3 MACHINE GUNS TO GUARD MINE SCHOOL

Curry School, closed yesterday after a bombardment Thursday by bushwhackers hidden on a hillside overlooking the town, will be opened Monday under the protection of three machine guns manned by deputies assigned by Sheriff Robert H. Braun.

The sheriff is making an independent investigation of the reign of terror that held Curry and Bruceton in a state of excitement for more than 24 hours. He will complete his investigation by tonight or tomorrow, he announced.

In addition to Sheriff Braun's probe, Capt. J. C. Mauk, of the state police at Butler, began an investigation this morning at the behest of Maj. Lynn J. Adams, superintendent of state police at Harrisburg. Another probe is being made by Congressman F. H. LaGuardia, of New York. County School Superintendent C. E. Dickey is investigating the closing of the school and Chief County Detective George W. Murren has been handed a report of the trouble by two of his men.

The shooting at Curry began when two drunken strike-breakers went through town firing their guns into the air, it was reported by County Detectives John Geisler and David Carlin. The sheriff's investigation, so far as it has gone, bears out this story, it is said. One of the nonunion men was accidentally shot by his companion or himself, it is believed.

Capt. Mauk visited Curry and Bruceton this morning and questioned union and nonunion men

Miners Would Discuss Peace Terms; Nothing to Discuss, Say Operators

Fannie Hurst's proposal in The Sun-Telegraph Thursday that an armistice be declared in the coal strike and the miners return to work, pending final settlement of the questions at issue, was laid before the union miners' chieftain and before the two largest operators, and this is what they said:

JOHN L. LEWIS, international president of the Mine Workers of America—We are willing to consider an armistice. I can make no suggestion as to what its terms might be until negotiations have been opened. The thing to do is to open negotiations. We have always been and are now willing to meet the operators in a conference.

C. E. LESHER, vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company—We indicated our position when we refused to attend the conference called by Secretary of Labor Davis, and it has not changed. We are not interested in the proposal of an armistice because we do not recognize the existence of a war. We will not meet the union's representatives because we have nothing to discuss with them.

HORACE F. BAKER, president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Corporation—The time for compromise has passed. We have won the fight. To talk of a truce now is like raising a squawk after the battle is over. As I see it, there is no alternative for the strikers but to continue idle or return to work on our terms. Events must take their inevitable economic trend. The union had plenty of opportunities to effect a settlement, but it ignored them. I was in a receptive mood towards overtures of peace during the first month of the strike, but I am no longer so. It is too late for such discussions.

BOMB MAYOR; THEN ASK 'HOW DO YOU LIKE IT?'

CAMPBELL, O., Feb. 4.—(AP.)—An hour and a half after a bomb damaged the home of Mayor T. Roy Gordon early today two suspects had been arrested and one had incriminated the other, according to police.

The men in jail are Samuel Guardule, 27, and Anthony Parish, 25. Parish said he was with Guardule early this morning when the latter took a package to the Mayor's house. Guardule denied he had a package.

No one was injured in the explosion, though Mr. and Mrs. Gordon and three children were in the house. Damage was estimated at $1,500.

A fire, apparently built of rubbish, was seen on the Mayor's porch just before the explosion, and neighbors were on the way to the house to give the alarm when the blast occurred, wrecking the front of the house, rocking nearby buildings and breaking glass a half-mile away.

Police said the plotters apparently had planned to draw the Mayor to the porch in time to receive the full force of the bomb, which had been placed at the front door. Weight is added to this theory by the fact that the Mayor had received a telephone call a few minutes before, warning him his house was about to be blown up. After the blast, the Mayor's home was called on the telephone five times, each time a man's voice asking: "Well, what do you think of it now?"

On one call, the voice said: "Is any damage done? Well, the next

HOLD GIRLS IN PARK DANCE

A dance at 2:30 o'clock this morning in Schenley Park by Roberta Thompson, artist model, police say, developed into the arrest of Roberta and her roommate, Betty Barry, at 409 McKee place, the confiscation of a half pint of whisky in the room and a warrant for the arrest of the proprietor of the Castle Gardens, widely known house of merriment at 1213 Wylie avenue, where the whisky is alleged to have been purchased.

Police attention was attracted to Roberta when residents of the hollow under the Wilmot bridge reported that a girl was doing a solo dance there. Investigating, the officers found Roberta.

When Roberta gave her address, police visited it and, they say, found Betty Barry, alias Marie Brazinski, with the whisky bottle.

In Morals Court today the girls told Magistrate A. D. Brandon that a boy friend had purchased the liquor at the cabaret. He issued a warrant for the arrest of the proprietor, which Inspector J. P. Clancey said would be served late today.

WARDEN SHIES AT HANGING

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Feb. 4—Opposed to capital punishment, Warden L. W. Robinson refused to witness the hanging of Wesley Swain, 42, of Parkersburg, in the state penitentiary here last night. A deputy warden acted in his stead.

Swain was convicted of criminal assault upon a 5-year-old Parkersburg girl. He denied his guilt to the last.

suffer for it." It is to be hoped that he is right about that, if sane.

THE first heavier than air ship that ever flew, carrying a man, the original Wright airplane, is on its way to England to be exhibited and remain permanently if the British choose. It should come back to this country, and the government ought to buy it for the Smithsonian Institution. Henry Ford would buy it for his museum, if the world's richest government can't afford it.

MUSSOLINI continues simplifying Italy's government, which in substance is the expression of Mussolini's "I will." Only one political party is to exist. Only those will vote "who contribute to the progress of the nation."

The number of deputies will be reduced from 560 to 400. It would be simpler to let Mussolini cast one vote for the whole nation. That is what happens in reality.

AUTO KILLS WOMAN, 73

Struck by an automobile while crossing California avenue near Davis avenue last night, Mrs. Ada Meloney, 73, of 623 Orchlee street, was killed, and her husband, William Meloney, 74, was injured seriously. Mrs. Meloney was dead when taken to St. John's General Hospital. Her husband suffered a fracture of the right leg, and probably was hurt internally.

Mr. Meloney is prominent in Masonic activities and was retired five years ago as principal of Columbus Public School, North Side. He spent more than 40 years in public school service here as teacher and leader. He is recorder of Allegheny Commandery, Free and Accepted Masons.

A. L. Brice, of 925 Jackman avenue, Avalon, driver of the automobile, was ordered to appear in the coroner's office, to give bond pending an inquest. The aged couple lived alone, and had gone out for a walk when the accident happened.

BURNED IN SEPTEMBER, MOTHER OF SIX DIES

OIL KING IS SET FREE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—A writ of habeas corpus was granted today to Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, who is facing punishment by the Senate for failure to answer questions of the oil committee.

The writ ordered that Stewart, who is held in custody by a Senate sergeant-at-arms, be produced forthwith before the court on the ground that he was being held illegally.

The writ was served at once, the whole procedure taking only a few minutes. It was asked hardly more than 30 minutes before Stewart was to have gone before the Senate, and the move was made on the advice of Stewart's legal staff, reinforced by several Washington attorneys.

When Stewart arrived at the courthouse, he waited in the clerk's office while the legal formalities of entering the writ on the records was being carried out. John J. McGrain, the deputy sergeant-at-arms, accompanied him. Stewart was then released from custody.

Hearing on the writ was set for next Tuesday and bond for the oil man was fixed at $1,000.

Coal Probe Reaches House

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Congress today had before it another resolution calling for an investigation of the coal strike situation in Western Pennsylvania and the other states of the bituminous area where production has been restricted for 10 months on account of the deadlock.

Representative John J. Casey, Republican of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., offered in the lower House a duplicate of the resolution of inquiry presented to the Senate by Senator Hiram Johnson of California. The resolution directs that the investigation be conducted by the interstate and foreign commerce committee.

Casey, in demanding the inquiry, announced that he would speak for an hour next Wednesday on the coal strike situation in Western Pennsylvania, gaining unanimous consent for this purpose.

Meantime no new development has taken place in the Senate to indicate when action will be forthcoming on the investigation sought by the California Senator. Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee in the upper chamber, to which the measure was referred, has promised to name a sub-committee to consider the proposal, but the names of those who will make it up have not been forthcoming.

Senator David A. Reed of Pittsburgh is planning to discuss the deadlock existing in the Pennsylvania mines soon as something of a follow to the vigorous speech on the subject this week by Senator Johnson. He said today he had not fully prepared his material for delivery.

GASOLINE CHEATING IS LAID TO TWELVE

TRUCKMEN ROUNDED UP

A conspiracy by which truck drivers and gasoline station attendants divided thousands of dollars paid for gasoline, which a transfer company employing the drivers did not receive, was disclosed today, police say with the arrest of seven drivers and five station workers.

A company official appeared at the hearing in the Allegheny Police Court and following a settlement with the men by which they agreed to pay back the money, Magistrate John J. Sweeney discharged them.

Plainclothesmen Jacob Isler, Earl McDonald and John McGonigal, after an investigation of large gasoline bills received by the transfer company, last night, began a roundup of the men. Four drivers and two oil company workers signed confessions of their part in the fraud, the officers say.

The transfer company has a charge account at the oil company's stations. Drivers, on getting gasoline, sign the bill. Police say the attendants would charge for extra gasoline, the drivers would sign the bills and the attendants, selling the extra fuel to other customers, would divide the revenue with the drivers.

THOSE ARRESTED

The drivers arrested are William Crafton, 32, of 5104 Gloster street; William Veatch, 32, of 312 Milroy street; James Cook, 22, of 79 Kittanning pike, Sharpsburg; Ernest Smith, 32, of 1004 Bidwell street; Raymond Miller, 21, of 707 Hays avenue, Mt. Oliver; Alex Waltner, 19, of 4117 Bristol street, and C. J. Ziegler, 38, of 1378 Sigel street.

The gasoline station attendants arrested are Frank Nicholson, 21, of 3651 California avenue; Fred Lapointe, 17, of 1300 Esplanade street; William Weems, 38, of 4221 Post street; C. J. O'Brien, 41, of 3822 Mintwood street, and Albert McClinton, 21, of 106 Reifers street, Mt. Oliver.

Cite 11 in Bankrupt 'Theft'

Harry E. Shaffer, tax collector of Armstrong county, and 10 other men, were cited yesterday by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for alleged removal of two locomotives, 60 mine cars and other articles from the premises of the Pine Run Coal Company, near New Bethlehem, after the property and affairs of the company had been placed in the hands of receivers appointed in an equity suit brought by Charles E. Teale.

A. Clinton Sickels and G. B. Straub, receivers appointed January 23, set forth in a petition that Shaffer, notwithstanding notice of injunction, sold property of the coal company to realize $2,000 for taxes due the county. They aver that Shaffer and the purchasers had notice of the court injunction before the sale, and have since refused demands for the return of it.

'FOX'S' NOTE TELLS HOW TO SHOW HE'S CRAZY

By JEROME M. STRAUSS,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—The state yesterday took up the task of attempting to prove that William Edward Hickman was sane when he kidnaped, killed and mutilated 12-year-old Marian Parker.

The defense rested this afternoon after a hypothetical question of several thousand words, including in addition the two confessions of the defendant, and been read by Attorney Frank Sievers. Dr. R. O. Shelton and Dr. A. L. Skoog, the defense alienists, answered the questioning by saying they believed Hickman to be insane.

J. Clark Sellers, microscopic and handwriting expert, was the first state witness. With Sellers on the stand, the state introduced a surprise letter, said to have been written by Hickman to a fellow prisoner in the county jail.

Hickman asked for advice regarding his course of conduct, saying the defense depositions were not enough to prove him insane.

"I've got to throw a fit in court," he wrote, "maybe in front of old man Parker himself.

"Then to bewilder the jury: Before the case is ended I'll get up and ask the judge if I can say something without my attorney butting in. Then I'll get up and give all that stuff about me wanting to do some good by living."

Hickman asked that the letter be destroyed, and signed himself "William Edward Hickman, alias the Fox, ha! ha! ha!"

He added as a postscript:

"You know and I know that I am not insane, however."

The ransom letter written by Hickman to Perry M. Parker, Marion's father, and the pitiful notes written by the girl herself while she was being held captive were shown to the jury by Deputy District Attorney Forrest Murray.

Dr. Reynolds, the first mental expert to be called by the state, pronounced Hickman sane. Hickman, he declared, possessed an "exceptionally fine brain." The defendant, he said, was of an extremely vicious type.

He read reports of his examinations of Hickman.

The defendant, he declared, had asserted himself to be sane. A little later he had asked Reynolds if insane persons usually didn't declare themselves to be sane.

Hickman, he said, possessed shrewdness, caution and a keen sardonic sense of humor, and knew the difference between right and wrong.

He offered to illustrate on Dr. Reynolds how he had strangled the girl, and used a pillow as the victim when the physician declined. He was grateful to District Attorney Keyes for being satisfied with hanging him for only one of the two murders of which he was accused.

Hickman, Dr. Reynolds continued, said he considered Oscar Wilde's writing "good philosophy."

He wasn't sure if there was a future life or not. He didn't think he ought to be let out for fear he might "do the same thing" again. He knew the world considered his crime to be "repellant."

HOLD MONEY MOTIVE

The state is attempting to prove that Hickman kidnaped the girl for money, and killed and dissected her to escape detection. It is trying to discredit the defense claim that Hickman was motivated by an insane belief that he was directed by a "special providence."

Hickman, according to the defense, is suffering from dementia praecox of the paranoic type, with delusions of grandeur.

Dr. A. L. Skoog of Kansas City was called as the last defense witness. He read the transcript of a conversation which, he said, he held in the county jail with the confessed kidnaper and slayer of little Marion Parker.

According to this record, Hickman played a phonograph record in his apartment after he had begun the dismemberment of the girl's body. He intimated that he did this to test his sensibilities at the behest of his "special providence," which apparently required that he be a superman.

Hickman, Dr. Skoog related, said he read the Bible "just to know what is in it." For himself, there was a special power or providence which functioned only for him.

Marion Parker had been born and lived "for this very thing," the crime being meant. She "knew what was going on and was not angry at anyone." Hickman, in committing the slaying, which he thought was right, had not taken her life away. Her spirit now saw what was going on.

about the shooting. He called on Justice of the Peace J. M. O'Rourke at Curry, before whom informations were made against two of the nonunion men accused of having started the shooting at the instigation of one of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company's coal and iron policemen.

CALLS REPUDIATION LIE

"It's a lie," was the way Squire O'Rourke characterized the repudiation of an affidavit given by Hampton Matthews, a non union miner, alleged to have confessed that he was hired for $25 by a coal and iron policeman to start the shooting. Squire O'Rourke showed the affidavit to Capt. Mauk and produced witnesses, one of whom is a New York newspaper man.

"Matthews was not beaten, neither was he threatened or intimidated in any way," declared Squire O'Rourke. "He was very anxious to confess after we got him at the railroad station. He was prepared for flight and there is no question of the truth of his affidavit, in my estimation."

Trouble at Daisytown and California, mines of the Vesta Coal Company, has been taken in hand by state police. A crowd of 300 or more men, women and children stationed themselves as pickets for a distance of several miles along the Pike Run road at 5:30 o'clock this morning, but were dispersed after about an hour and a half by two state policemen.

Mob picketing was first resorted to yesterday afternoon when several hundred persons jeered and hooted non union miners as they emerged from the Vesta mines. Thirty persons, including about a dozen women, were arrested by coal and iron police on charges of unlawful assembly, but they were all discharged by Justice of the Peace H. L. Swartz, of California.

This morning's gathering of union people prevented 42 strike-breakers from reporting for work, according to officials of the Vesta Coal Company, but this does not hamper the operation of the mines, they say.

State police ordered this morning's crowd to disperse and permitted eight pickets at each mine entrance.

FALL RIVER, MASS., Feb. 4.—More than eight thousand persons are out of employment and facing privation in a temperature of 15 degrees above zero in this fire stricken city.

Scores of the injured, which included more than 300 firemen and volunteers, are still in hospitals, under treatment for severe burns or other injuries.

The community is doubly threatened with an epidemic of typhoid fever and with a lowered water supply.

Dr. Ernest M. Morris, city health commissioner, and A. J. Weston, state engineer, announced after investigation that Watuppa reservoir, the city's drinking water supply, was lowered nine feet by fire hose use.

As a result of cross connections in mills and back pressure in the water mains there is a grave danger of a typhoid outbreak, the health experts said.

Every precaution against pestilence was urged. Citizens were advised to boil all drinking water for 20 minutes.

The fire loss was conservatively estimated last night at $10,000,000. But insurance company experts raised the damage estimate to as high as $25,000,000. Police Commissioner Henry F. Nickerson, who is an insurance adjuster, scaled his estimate up to $35,000,000.

Some of the attractively gowned young women who attended the Aero Club ball last night in the William Penn Hotel were Miss Dorothy Scott and Miss Ethel Alexander, who, with their escorts, formed a foursome for the evening; a group of friends including Mrs. W. M. Sharp, Mrs. R. P. Murdoch, Mrs. H. M. McHenry and Mrs. James C. Boudreau; Mrs. R. H. Jennings, and Mrs. Howard Thurston, wife of the famous magician, and her daughter, Jane, who enjoyed a few hours' dancing. Capt. Thomas S. Voss was general chairman for the ball, which was one of the best attended affairs the club has ever held. Assisting Lieut. James M. Magee, as chairman of the patrons' committee, were Frank Dickson, Col. William Thaw, Bennett Oliver, Charles L. Snowden, Jr., A. W. Wyckoff, Hal Bazley, Col. H. C. Fry, Col. Carl E. Glock and J. C. COAL POLICE CRUELTY SHOCKS LA GUARDIA

"I have never seen such thouht-out, deliberate cruelty in my life as that displayed against the unfortunate strikers by the coal operators and their army of coal and iron police," said Congressman F. H. LaGuardia last night after a day spent in gathering information in the strike situation in this district.

"Imagine, gentlemen," he said, "a private army, with its private jails, where the miners are unlawfully detained and viciously assaulted! Surely such flagrant disregard of man's constitutional rights brings this affair clearly within the province of a senatorial investigation.

"Saturday I shall hear the operators' side of the case, if they will talk to me," the Congressman said, "but it will take a h—— of a lot of explaining to account for men walking along a ridge, as at Bruceton the other day, and firing into the barracks of these suffering miners and the firing into a school where, I understand, school was in session.

WANTS SHOWN

"But if the operators can convince me they are not responsible for these outrages, I will come out clearly, and say so. I have been preaching Americanism as I understand it, where justice and freedom and law and order prevail, but these miners and their families don't even get a shadow of it.

"I put the responsibility right up to the owners of the mines and the companies buying coal mined under such un-American practices as these. I talked with women who had been mistreated by coal and iron police and was in the justice of the peace's office in Broughton when the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company telephoned and offered bond for the men wanted, but would not produce the men. What kind of law is that?

"It is time for action, believe me," LaGuardia said. "A little good will and decency, sitting around a table, could settle this strike in an hour. The cost of the coal and iron police to the operators must be far in excess of the

SEIZE MAN IN SMITH CASE

By International News service.

NEW YORK, Feb, 4.—A Costa Rican, alleged to have written a letter demanding $10,000 ransom for the return of Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing Smith College student, was being grilled at police headquarters today. The suspect, a painter, of Yonkers, N. Y., was captured after he had picked up a decoy package hidden in a vacant lot.

Although the prisoner said he was Vivian Collins, 27, the ransom letter bore the signature of Robert Brown. It was sent last Thursday to Miss Anna W. Gramm, grandaunt of the 18-year-old heiress, at the Smith home here. The writer stated that he and his sister were

Edmund Goulding Writes Film Story For Colleen Moore—Will Direct Her at First National

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.

VERSATILITY is a desirable asset if one can capitalize it. Apparently Edmund Goulding can and does. A little less than two weeks ago he resigned from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as director. Since the day he and M. G. M. parted company he has agreed to direct his own story for Colleen Moore at First National and write the adaptation of "The River" for the Fox Company.

"The River," by Tristam Tupper, is to be Frank Borzage's next Fox drama, and it is dramatic enough to intrigue Mr. Goulding, who is one of Hollywood's greatest movie enthusiasts. Charles Farrell who, by the way, has sold his Ford car, will play the lead.

Charlie will have to work hard to support that grand new roadster that supplants the first. As soon as he signed the new contract with the Fox Company he sold the famous Ford and permitted himself to luxury of a new car.

Anyone who knew William K. Pinkerton, the veteran detective, was privileged to hear some of the most fascinating yarns that were ever woven around crime. John Considine, Jr., has always remembered the story of a failure which Old Man Pinkerton used to tell on himself. With the great demand for mystery melodramas Mr. Considine has come to the conclusion now it is time to put that story on paper. He is doing so with the assistance of Wallace Smith, the well known newspaperman and writer. They are calling their detective yarn, "Crime Wave" a good title. What memories come to me of Old Man Pinkerton and W. E. Lewis and Bat Masterson. These three old-timers who knew every crime and adventure from the James Boys' capture to Villa's execution in Mexico, used to meet regularly at the Morning Telegraph and swap stories of the days when Bat was sheriff of Dodge City.

One hears many things during the course of the day in Hollywood. A few of the items jotted down by this reporter are: Max Ree's new contract with First National. He becomes costume director. Edgar Lewis's arrangement with Tiffany-Stahl to direct Robert Fraser in "The Scarlet Dove." Mr. Lewis is an old-timer and at one time produced independently. Clive Brook has decided the role in "The Three Sinners," Pola Negri's next picture, is not suited to him, hence his request that he be withdrawn from the cast. Roscoe Karns becomes a crook with Clara Bow in the film, "Ladies of the Mob," directed by William Wellman. It's Clara's first offense as a film thief. Al Cohn, now woroking on the scenario of "The Butter and Egg Man" is in daily conference with Richard Wallace, who will direct Jack Mulhall in this well-known comedy.

When you are in the movies and decide to get married you take your honeymoon when you can. Blanche Mehaffey had one installment of her honeymoon with her husband, George J. Hausen, when she saw California by airplane. Her second installment started Wednesday when she left for Chicago, New York, Havana, Miami and New Orleans. Down to the train to see her and the bridegroom on their way were Rosetta and Vivian Duncan, Ona Brown and a score of other friends. Just before leaving Miss Mehaffey had a tea at her home for some of her friends.

A reunion of more than ordinary interest has taken place on the Al Green set of "Honor Bound." Years and years ago when Al Green was at the Selig Studios, struggling for recognition and Thomas Santchi was playing in such dramas as "The Spoilers" and other Selig specialties, these two were friends. Now Thomas Santchi is playing the part of the husband in "Honor Bound," a wronged husband, I might say, for his wife, Estelle Taylor, does considerable vamping. Moreover, she confesses she is in love with George O'Brien, at least it looked that way from a scene I watched.

Anyone who doesn't play bridge these days is considerably out of luck. It is the most popular game in Hollywood at the moment. Norma Talmadge entertained this last week at her home on Hollywood Boulevard. Immediately after dinner groups of three and four disappeared, to be located later engaged in the serious business of trying to win a rubber at bridge. I am told that some of our well known movie stars are taking lessons by radio. It is a good way to learn the game for following the playing of the hands there is always an analysis given and a reason why the different cards should be played. All of which has nothing to do with movies, you will admit.

Sue Concern That Sold Gun to Young Killer

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Feb. 4.—Because Andy Dyken, 15, shot and killed his mother, and wounded his father and a farm hand, the Neff Lumber Company, today was made defendant in three damage suits aggregating $85,000. The defendant company, it is alleged, sold the revolver to the boy, who is now under indictment for first degree murder. The father of the boy and husband of the dead woman, Nick Dyken is suing for $50,000; a farm hand, Andy Chervenki, is suing for $10,000 and the First National Bank of St. Clairsville, administrator of the woman's estate is suing for $15,000. Under a state law a firm is responsible for the acts of a purchaser of a weapon if he is under age.

TITO SCHIPA SINGS IN MOSQUE MONDAY

Tito Schipa, Italian tenor, comes to Syria Mosque next Monday night as the star in the sixth May Beegle Concert. Schipa's programs usually are so attractive that his audiences are insistent for encores, with the result that his programs are nearly always doubled. His work in opera gives him an unusual repertoire from which to choose.

Harold Bauer and Ossip Gabrilowitsch played a two-piano recital in Carnegie Music Hall, and for the first time since they appeared here before they made pianos sound very little like percussion instruments. The literature for this type of playing is quite limited but these artists managed a program which touched all the great music epochs and which undoubtedly was attractive enough for the entire audience.

I cannot speak here of the individual merits and qualities of the players. Suffice it to say that they are of somewhat different character; Bauer is a poet in tone and feeling, Gabrilowitsch is always the romantic. When they weld their aspirations and natures to make such art as we heard last night, then I can only heap words of praise on them for submerging self and exalting music. Their playing, so near perfection, is withal exhuberant; no matter how gentle, it is never devitalized.

The audience looked up from the very first notes of the Bach, which was not austere, but brittle and sparkling. In spite of the velocity of the Mozart sonata, I found much repose in its pearly scales and embellishments. The presto and the Arensky waltz at the end of the program had to be repeated, while we all wished the concert was to begin all over again.

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—There's a he-man in Athens, Ga., today who isn't afraid of Chicago gangsters, and the tougher they are the better, he wrote Detective William O'Connor, offering his services in ridding the city of its underworld.

The letter, signed by H. L. Jackson, read, in part:

"I take the liberty of writing you regarding your call for red-blooded men and true who cannot be bought, to join your machine gun squad. I state that I am an ex-soldied and am not afraid of all the gunmen in Chicago, come one, come all."

LA GUARDIA IS SHOCKED

difference between the wages the operators want to pay and the wages under the Jacksonville agreement."

Congressman LaGuardia's telegram, dispatched to Senator Johnson last night, was as follows:

"I have just made a tour of the mining district and have interviewed several people. I have never witnessed such distressing conditions. Misery, suffering and humiliation of strikers and their families simply beyond description. The brutality of the private police of the mine owners and utter disregard of law is shocking and amazing. The poor, unhappy and miserable strike-breakers are veritable prisoners. They are not only exploited but are being debauched and depraved by their employers. A crew of these strike-breakers crazed with hootch were armed with shotguns yesterday and told to shoot into the barracks where the families of the miners are living. They even deliberately shot into the school while in session. Have personally seen signed confessions of one of these gunmen admitting being instructed and paid by private police to commit these outrageous acts. Mine owners not only maintain private police force but have private jail where miners are unlawfully detained and viciously assaulted. Please press your resolution to a vote. An investigation should commence at once. Am continuing my investigation."

SEIZE MAN IN SMITH CASE

holding Miss Smith as a prisoner and that she would be liberated upon payment of the reward money of $10,000 and two railroad tickets to San Francisco.

The writer revealed that he had previously written a ransom note from Springfield, Mass. It was on January 13 that the Smith College freshman disappeared from the school at Northampton, Mass.

Following the alleged kidnaper's instructions, postal inspectors placed the decoy package in a vacant lot near Van Cortlandt Park, in the northern part of New York City. Collins, the Costa Rican, appeared at the appointed time, seized the package, and left in an automobile. The postal inspector gave chase in a commandeered automobile and captured him.

Collins denied that he wrote the ransom letter. He was to be arraigned in Federal Court later today.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Ellen Stone's Three Sisters to Be Members of Bridal Party at Nuptials to Be Held Wednesday

ELLEN STONE'S three sisters are to be members of her bridal party next Wednesday, when she marries Charles Chester Bailey, of Oakmont, she announced today. Her only unmarried sister, Marian, is to be the maid of honor, and the two matrons of honor will be Mrs. Sydney A. Stewart and Mrs. James Shirley Austin. She is also to have six bridesmaids, Ellen McClay, Martha Green and Elinor Munroe, of Pittsburgh; Cassandra Stewart, of Baltimore; Dorothy Vilas, of Chicago, and Ruth Jones, of New York.

Wilson Shaw Bailey will be his brother's best man and the ushers are to include Alexander Johnson Robertson, Sydney A. Stewart, James S. Austin and Maxwell McCreery, of Pittsburgh; Morris Scott Verner, Jr., of Oakmont; Howard Levi, of Evansville, Ind.; Thompson Morris Wakeley, of Chicago; Roger Wolcott Hooker, of Niagara Falls, and Howard Stanley Judd, of New York.

They have set 5 o'clock as the hour for the ceremony, which is to be performed in the Sixth Presbyterian Church by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. H. H. Forsyth, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Edgar Jones, of Oakmont. Just a small reception will be held later at the house.

Ellen and her fiance will be guests of honor at a dinner which Clarence Nesbitt and Kemp Fuller will give tonight in the University Club, and last night Ellen McClay gave a similar affair in her home. Eleanor Longenecker entertained at bridge yesterday afternoon in the Pittsburgh Golf Club, and on Thursday night Mrs. Stewart gave the "spinster" dinner. Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., the former Dorothy Babcock, was hostess at bridge Wednesday.

Tomorrow night Helen Murdoch is going to give a buffet supper, and on Monday night Martha Green will be hostess at a dinner. The rehearsal dinner is set for Tuesday night in the University Club with the Shirley Plumer Austins and the James Shirley Austins as hosts. The morning of the wedding Eleanor Munroe is to give a breakfast.

Two interesting weddings are set for today—both at 5:30 o'clock. Frances Schoen and Lewis A. Park are to be married in the home of Frances' mother, Mrs. William Henry Schoen, in Fifth avenue, by the Rev. Dr. Edwin J. Van Etten. The other is a Sewickley wedding, with Katherine Clapp, daughter of the George Hubbard Clapps, and William Ayres Galbraith as the chief figures. It, too, is going to be a home event.

It would seem as though more and more Pittsburghers are getting interested in aviation, judging by the large crowd that came to the William Penn Hotel last night for the Aero Club ball. The ballroom was so crowded that dancing was difficult, so an overflow dance was held in the blue room.

Every now and then during the evening, dancing was stopped so that an entertainment might be staged. There were sketches, specialty dances and a military dance, as well as some funny antics by a tramp comedian. The only decorations in the ballroom were national flags and Army and Navy emblems, hung from the balcony rail.

You have heard a good deal about the group of debutante cigaret venders—and they quite lived up to expectations, looking very trig and gay in costumes of crimson velvet and cloth of gold, with crimson slippers with gold heels. They carried the cigarets in huge baskets hung about their necks with ribbons. Mary Louise Johnson was captain of these girls, who included Josephine Nicola, Betty Scott, Mary Oliver, Virginia Goldsbury, Jane Foster, Anne King Scott, Mary Childs and Elizabeth George.

Capt. Thomas S. Voss was general chairman for this year's ball, which, I believe, excelled, in attendance at least, any of the club's other parties. Lieut. Col. James M. Magee, of the Air Corps Reserve, was chairman of patrons, and others who assisted were Col. Harry C. Fry, Col. Carl E. Glock and J. C. Wilson.

Included in the audience which heard Mrs. Ida Wright Bowman's talk before the Friday Morning Club in Carnegie Music Hall yesterday were many high school students. This was the third discussion of political current events which Mrs. Bowman has given this season before the club and most of it she devoted to "presidential possibilities." At every election 25 per cent of the voters are voting for the first time and this constitutes a problem, since they have not had time to be "lined up." Mrs. Bowman said. She spoke of the Jackson Day harmony dinner, calling Smith's absence "a strategic move." Pennsylvania will be for Mellon, she declared, and as for Hoover's "not being enough of an American, enough of a Republican and enough of a Protestant," she said, "this is purely campaign matter and will be used for what it is worth and probably more." She stressed the fact that the two main issues before both parties are prohibition and foreign relations. She also spoke of the Panama convention. Next week's speaker will be Tom Skeyhill, the young Australian soldier, poet and world traveler, who will have as his subject "Soviet Russia Today."

Members of the College Club enjoyed an interesting lecture and discussion yesterday afternoon on the subject of life insurance. The speaker, Royal S. Goldsbury, took as his topic "Some Overlooked Resources," pointing out how the property value of the world had been studied and estimated, while the far greater human value is often overlooked. The earning power of a man's mind is an enormous resource which belongs to himself and to his family, and like other resources this is in jeopardy unless some replacement value has been provided. Mr. Goldsbury said: "We often meet wives who are opposed to insurance; but we have never yet met a widow who was against it."

ORDER POLL OF WIVES WORKING FOR CITY

An investigation to determine the number of married women working for the city and how many of them are wives of city or county employes has been started by the Civil Servic Commission, it was learned yesterday. The investigation is a result of keen competition for positions on the city payroll. Heads of various city departments have been asked to supply the information to James Smith, secretary of the commission.

Complaints frequently have been made that men employed by the city have used their influence to secure positions for members of their families. The complaints of the job seekers have not been directly against the wives but against women in general.

BELLEVUE SEEKS NEW TRIAL IN DAMAGE CASE

On the ground that the verdict was excessive, Attorney C. P. Lang made a motion yesterday for a new trial in the case of Dorothea Wuesthoff, who was awarded a verdict of $5,500 against the borough of Bellevue for injuries sustained when she fell on a broken and defective sidewalk and broke a wrist. During the first trial of the case several weeks ago, Judge Josiah Cohen, who heard the case, dismissed the jury for the reason that a witness had conversed with a juror.

$1,356 RAISED AT MINE BENEFIT

Howard Thurston, world-renowned magician, called upon all the mystic powers at his command yesterday afternoon at the Pitt Theater and produced a snug sum of money, which today is being used to purchase food for hungry women and children living in draughty union miners' barracks throughout the Pittsburgh district. A total of $1,356.85 was raised at the benefit performance, $50 of which was realized from the sale of coal mine ballades composed by Billy Neilan in the union barracks at Acmetonia. A committee of women from Acmetonia attended the performance and sold copies of the ballades in the audience after Neilan had sung them to "Mother" McGinley, picturesque figure of the Allegheny Valley coal fields, on the stage.

Many persons of prominence attended the performance. Mayor Charles H. Kline and several members of his cabinet occupied a box with Senator Frank Harris, Mrs. Thurston and her daughter, Miss Jane Thurston, and John B. Reynolds, manager of the Pitt and Alvin theaters.

The magician called the Mayor, Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh and Director James M. Clark and the others to the stage and asked them to say a few words in connection with miners' relief. The city officials expressed a desire to co-operate with any worthy movement to bring aid to the suffering women and children in the coal fields in and around Pittsburgh, and lauded the magician and his family for the interest they have taken in the plight of these unfortunate victims.

Senator Harris expressed his gratitude to the Thurstons for their work in distributing tons of food and clothing to the needy miners' families and urged those in the audience to carry on the relief.

Thurston gave one of the best shows of his career. Interspersed with fun and magic were stories of the suffering he had witnessed at Curry, Mollenauer, Acmetonia, Harwick, Indianola and Russellton.

"I am very sorry I cannot stay right here in Pittsburgh and continue relief work, for these families are in dire need. I have seen untold suffering, especially among the women and children, and the little I can do to alleviate this privation is merely a drop in the bucket.

"It is up to you people of Pittsburgh to carry on this work, and I sincerely hope your interest is sufficiently aroused that none of these poor people are allowed to remain in want," he declared.

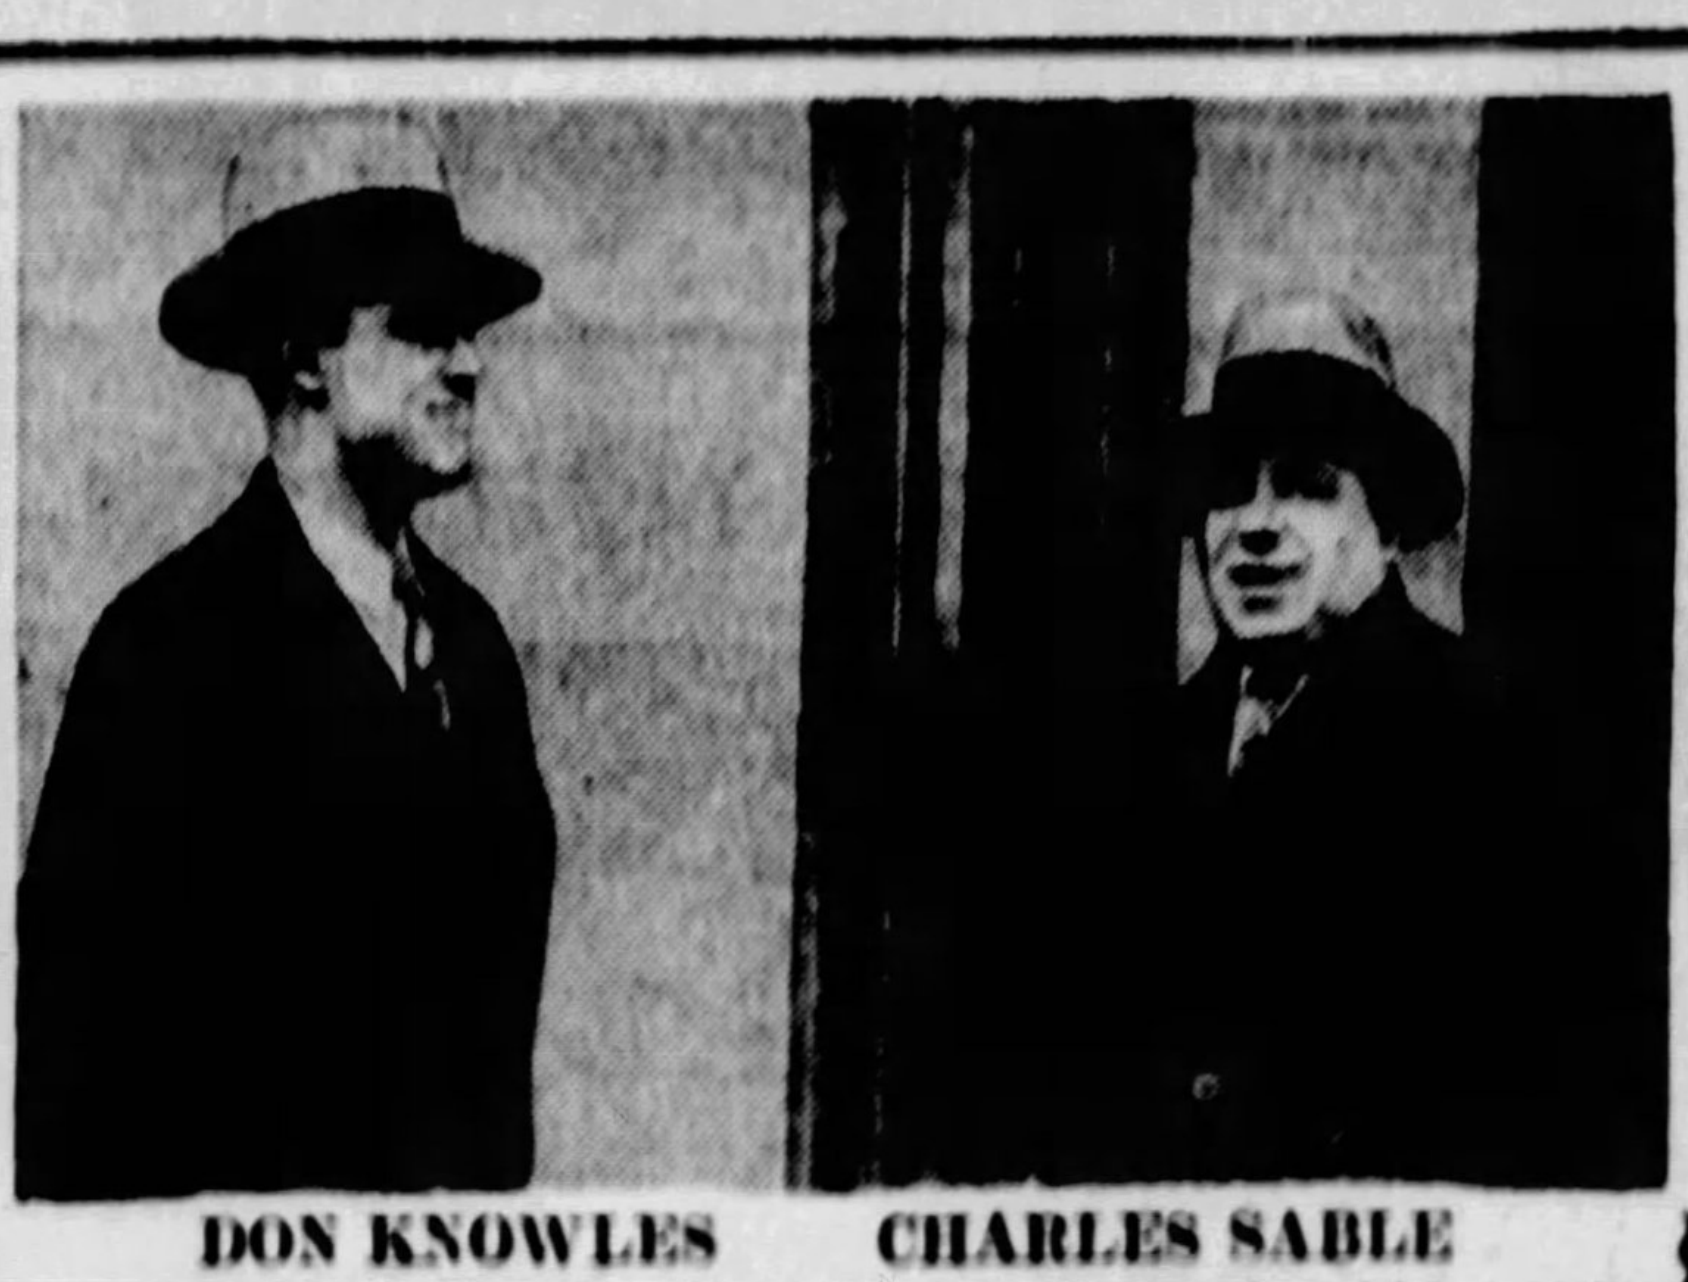
HAULS 'EM IN

This is one of the towing trucks owned by Charles Sable of the Sable-Richards Garage in Center avenue, which hauls in automobiles from the downtown district on orders of the police department for violation of the parking rules. Motorists have complained against the conduct of several of the garages having contracts with the city, charging irregularities. Sable says most of his job consists in fixing violations, releasing cars without charge, and suffering abuse from peeved owners.



DON KNOWLES CHARLES SABLE

And this is Charles Sable, who owns the trucks which tow in the cars tagged by cops. Don Knowles knows his irate car owner, for he is associated with Sable, and has the pleasure of listening to the grief and taking the owner's $3.65 for towing and storage.

WHERE THEY'RE STORED

This is the garage that belongs to Sable. Many indignant car owners say their cars are stored in the alley back of this garage, and even on the front street. Sable says it's silly, for there is lots of room inside. Anyhow, Public Safety Director Clark is going to investigate the matter, and is reported to favor a plan for the city to do the hauling and storing, with city-owned trucks. Sable says the city is welcome to the job, because it doesn't pay much, anyhow.

Ives will be the principal speaker at the Downtown Mission in the evening, his subject being "Volunteers in Christ." Mrs. Ives will be the soloist. At the East End Mission William D. Rue will be the principal speaker at the evening meeting. His subject will be "What is the Sum of Your Life?" The Volunteer juvenile chorus will sing. The Rev. Dr. George W. No, Girls, Petting's Too Costly

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ALMOST invariably, when a [illegible] is printed which [illegible] live, modern problems [illegible] engaging the attention of young folks, a number of letters of comment reach me, in many cases offering valuable, practical suggestions.

I shall print three letters that comment on subjects my correspondents and I have recently discussed.

The first is written on a letterhead of a famous naval hospital.

"DEAR Miss Fairfax," writes Mac, "I am a very interested reader of your column.

"I have just read the letter of a girl who complains that modern men care only for girls who are wild flappers. From her letter, I don't believe she ever met a 'man.' By 'man' I do not mean anything that wears pants or grows a mustache. What real man would allow his sister to go on a petting party? Not one!

"There are girls who will give up a date with a respectable young man to go on a 'hot party.' That kind of a girl is a lot worse than the sheiks themselves, for they are the ones who encourage petting parties.

"Please don't get the idea that I am a preacher, for I am not. I am a hospital corpsman in the U. S. Navy. I like clean sports—fishing and swimming being my favorites. I like to dance and I would go to dances quite often if I could find a nice girl to go with.
"MAC."

THANK you, Mac, for your good wishes and good letter. Let me assure you, many a girl who reads this column will wish she had a friend like you—a young man of principle and honor who enjoys clean fun and sport and respects girls. I am sure you will find a nice girl to take to dances, Mac, if you try. And in time you will find the nicest girl of all for your companion and help-mate.

Here is a letter from "Fair-Minded Kathleen" on the same subject—modern men and the kind of girls they prefer:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
"I hope you will print this letter to let Mr. 'Troubled in Mind,' who wrote you recently know there is at least one girl who defends the gentleman of today.

"I go to many parties and I meet many different types of men. Several girls I know say that if a man doesn't pet he is slow. They seem to like to be petted. But I must say that my especial friend is always a perfect gentleman. I don't think there are many men who, when a girl sets a limit, will go any farther.

"This is my opinion: The modern girl gets just as much respect from men as she demands."

IT IS good to know that there are thousands of girls like Kathleen who receive the normal amount of attention a girl likes and win friendship and love without cheapening themselves or becoming embittered.

The third letter I shall print is signed "One Who Knows from Experience:

"Dear Miss Fairfax—I have never been extremely popular, yet I always have a good time. I have never had to stay away from a dance if I wished to go for lack of an escort, yet there was not the mad rush for my society that most girls seem to like.

"I am married now to the dearest man on earth. One of the fast men of the set introduced me to my husband. He asked why he had never seen me at wild parties. I was proud to be able to reply that I never went to wild parties. None of the men of that set married the girls they played around with except one or two who had to.

"I am happy now, because my husband and I love each other and I can go anywhere with him without meeting men who can say they have been out at joy rides or necking parties with me. I am not a prude. I wear short dresses, use a little powder and rouge and have bobbed hair.

"Please tell the girls, 'Don't pet.' Tell them to be their own sweet selves and they will find the Man."

DOESN'T it give you courage and hope, girls, to read this fresh evidence from letters which are typical of thousands I receive, that men are still of high character, girls high-minded and lovable and married life is still happy and contented. Do not be discouraged because of the seeming prevalence of lawlessness and vulgarity, which are more openly exploited now than formerly.

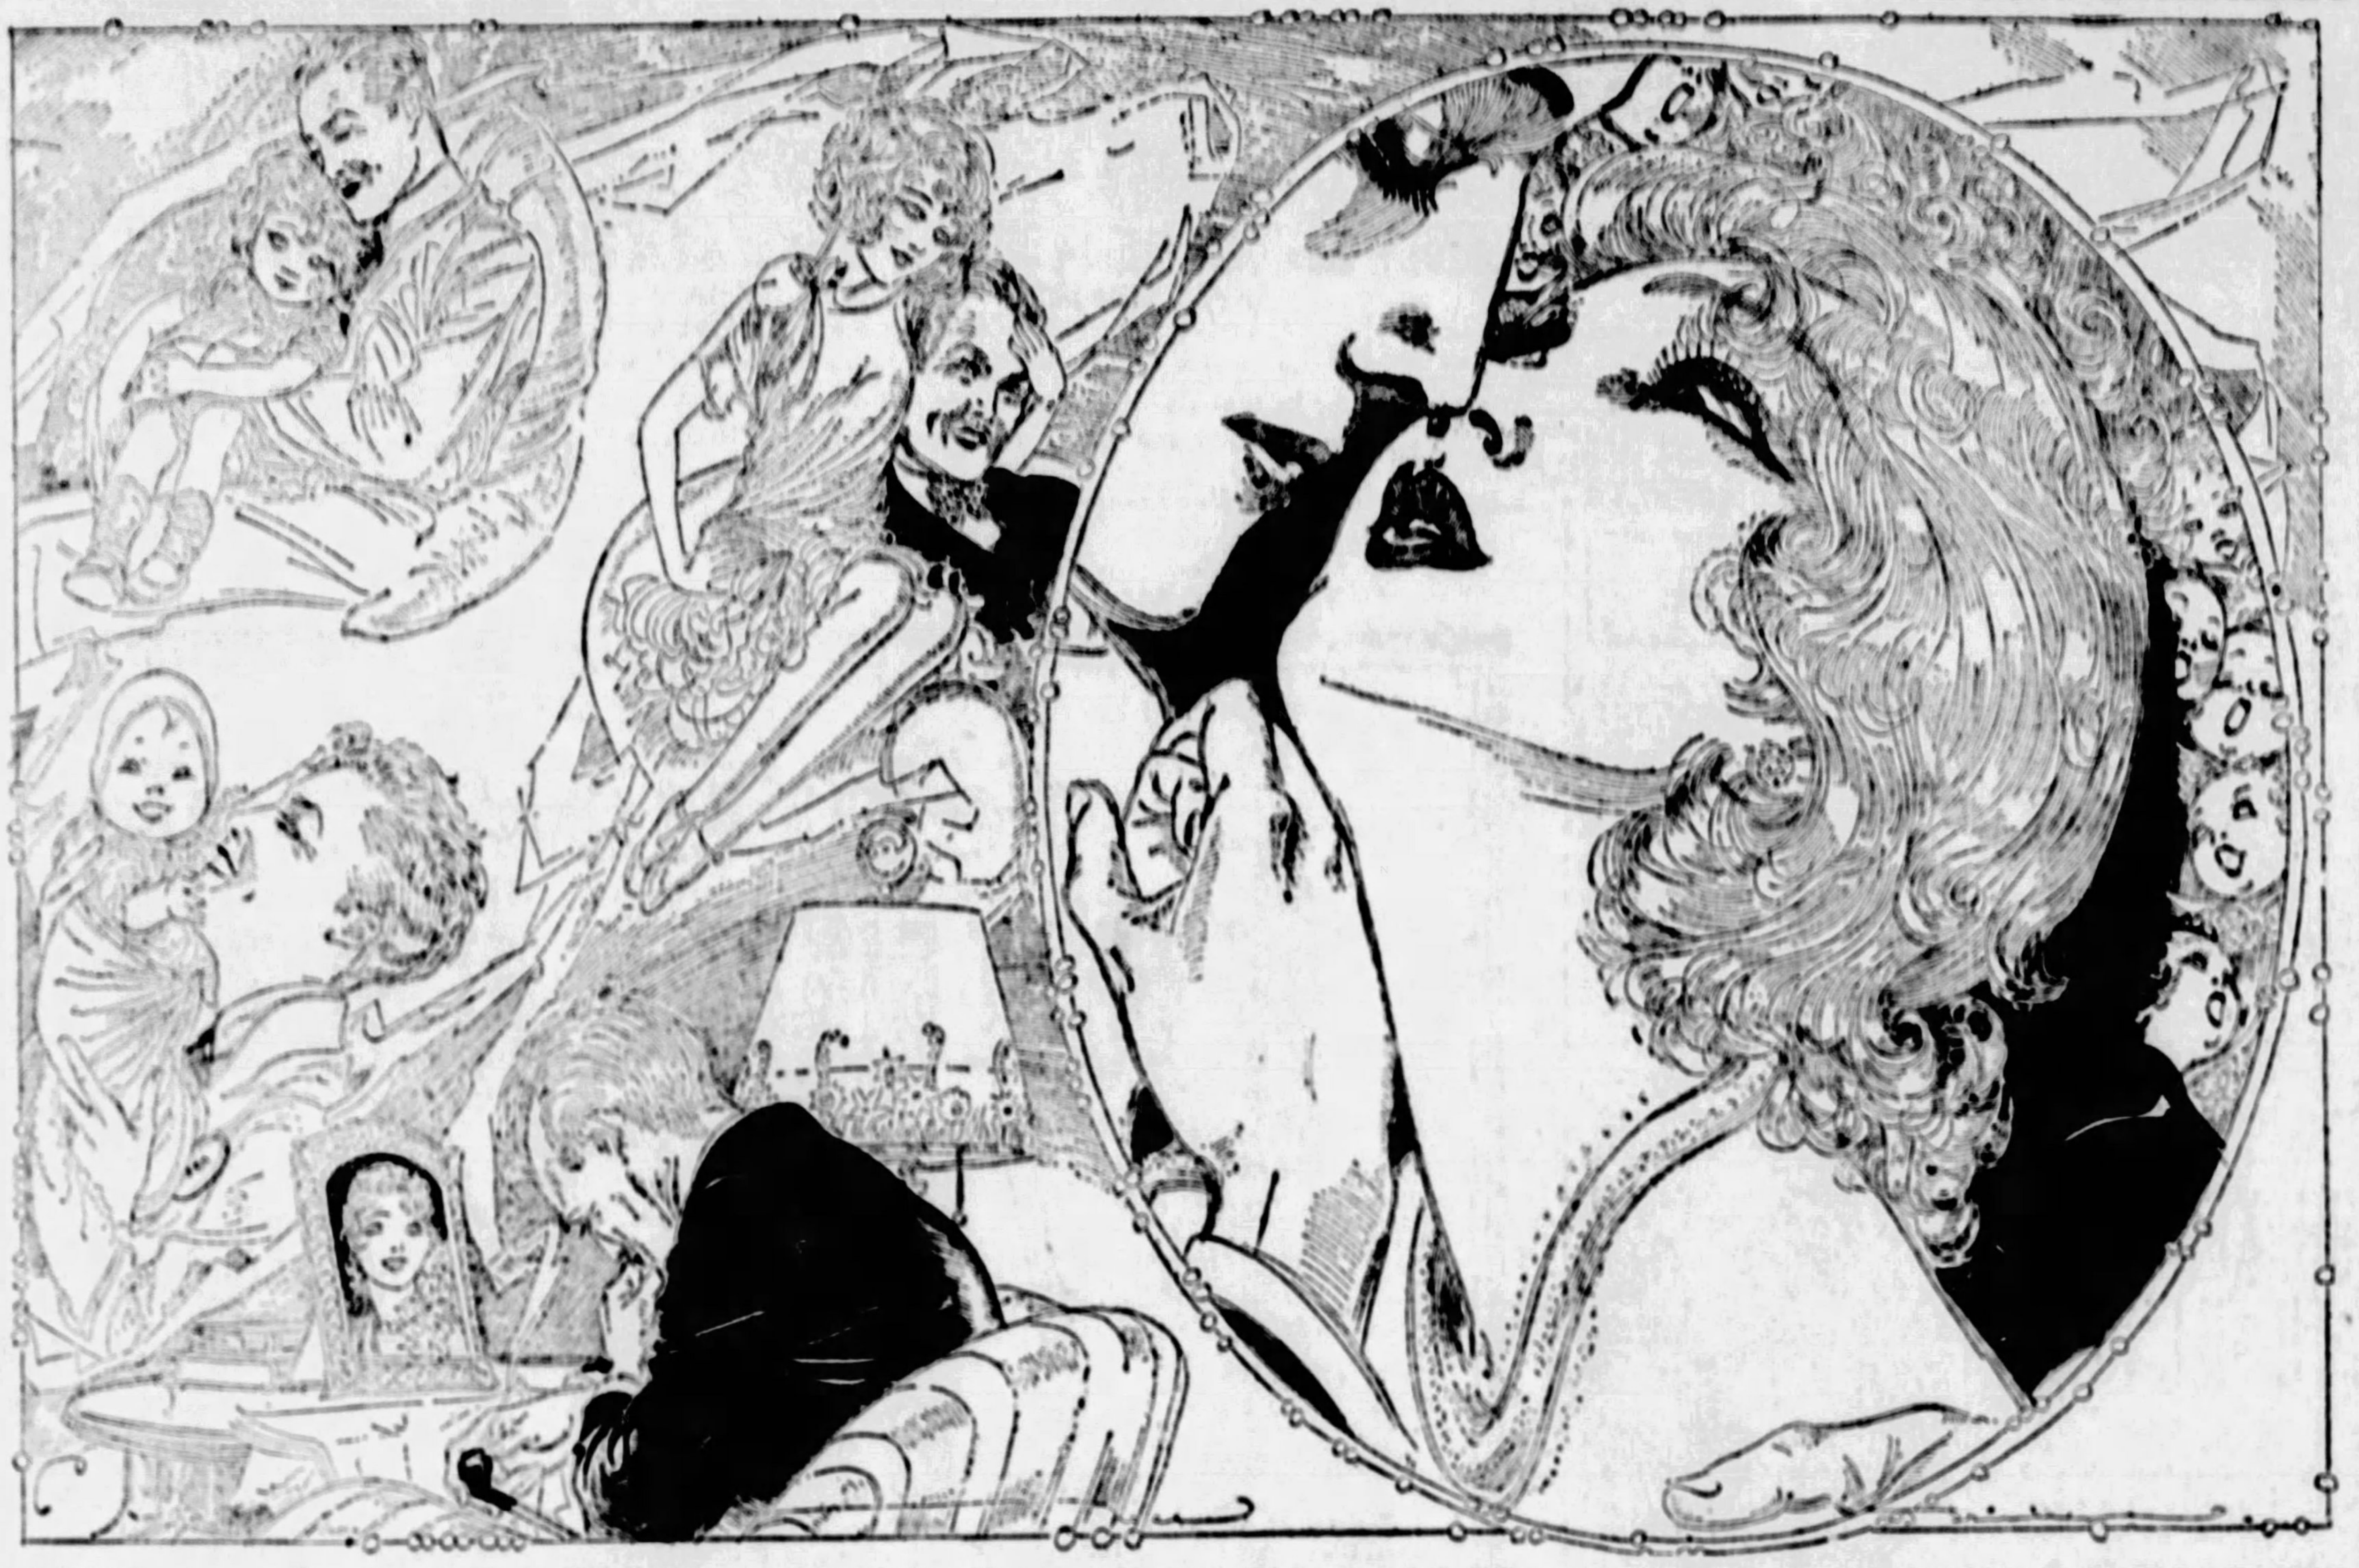
MY LITTLE GIRL! -:- "HIS LITTLE GIRL—INDEED! MINE!" -:- Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY



AN EAGER young man flings himself out of a library where a grey-haired man sits with his eyes set in a pained, but smiling, faraway stare. His paper has fallen in a heap on the table-edge. The framed picture of a laughing girl with golden hair looks back at his unseeing eyes. He is thinking—THINKING—seeing—remembering—hearing—feeling.

The eager young man, having flung himself through the door, finds and catches a girl, in soft white with a gold chain around her neck, in his arms, and begins to kiss her in a manner that says he cannot believe his ears or his eyes. He has just "asked" her father for her. Of course in the modern way he has long ago asked her for herself first! And now he gulps out between caresses, after a smothered, "he said 'yes' and that he really 'liked' me!"—an old, old phrase, long used by lovers, frayed by a thousand and thousand of years' wear but still shining like a real gold thread, the old phrase, "MY little girl!" "MY little girl!"

And in the library, hearing, the older man, with his memorable memories, snorts to his devastated heart, "HIS little girl! Where does he get that? How long has he seen her, known her, loved her? What does he know of her sweetness? What has he given her, or had of her? One moment of her darling life. HIS little girl. MY little girl. Mine! From the beginning. The round funny baby. The toddle-baby. The little baby girl with curls and knees, slippers and dear little patting hands who cuddled. The longer girl in her first party dress, still loving her Daddy. The other girl, this one, lovely, gay, slim, beloved, still loving her Daddy. HIS baby girl—indeed. MINE, MINE only!" —NELL BRINKLEY.

Danger in Disease of Nasal Tissues and Adenoids

IT IS said by all experts who have studied the question, that at least one-half of all the diseases children have are preventable diseases.

DR. COPELAND

Listen to this quotation from a recently printed book:

"It is estimated that at least one-half of the 3,000,000 or more sick beds constantly filled in the United States would be unnecessary, and over 600,000 yearly deaths might be prevented if such preventive measures as are entirely practicable were promptly undertaken."

A nation cannot grow strong and powerful if it has a high death-rate. No household is doing its duty if by neglect the lives of the family are needlessly endangered.

Even tiny babies suffer from obstruction of the nose and throat. It is bad enough to have the quantity of air reduced, but this isn't the only effect of such obstruction.

Diseases of the nasal tissues, adenoids, infected tonsils and all ailments which serve to obstruct the air passages are too menacing to neglect. Here are some of the consequences.

Inflammation of the middle ear with acute deafness and excruciating earache may come from a disturbance which crept into the ear from the nose. Likewise, obstruction of the mouth of the passageway to the ear—the Eustachian tube—may dam up the secretions in the ear and cause middle-ear disturbance. This is one of the symptoms of adenoids.

An infection once seated in the middle ear, may extend to the mastoid cells. These spaces in the spongy bone back of the ear, open into the middle ear. If a pus infection is found in the ear, there is danger of trouble in the mastoid cells and an attack of that serious trouble "mastoiditis."

Infected adenoids, tonsils, or continued pus formation in the ear, offers the possibility of extension to the glands of the neck, to the heart, and to the joints of the body. The kidneys are not safe and there is always the danger of general blood poisoning.

We must not regard too lightly the simple "colds" and other disturbances of nose and throat. They must be given prompt and thorough treatment. By taking them in the early stages, the health, comfort and contentment of the child will be served.

Answers to Health Questions

M. F. Q.—Is there any remedy for a bald spot on the head? The hair around the spot is white. I have a nerve condition. Could this be causing the trouble?

A.—The condition of the scalp and hair depends to a great extent upon the state of the general health. The nerve trouble has an undoubted effect upon your health in general. Try to clear this up first of all. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question. A good hair tonic may be helpful.

P. H. Q.—How much should a boy aged 13, 5 feet 3 inches tall weigh?

A.—He should weigh about 113 pounds.

B. S. Q.—What is the cause of cracking joints?

A.—This is usually due to lack of synovial fluid. Massage the parts with warm cod liver oil before retiring. This will probably help you.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE ACID TEST OF LOVE

VERILY, my Daughter, I charge thee, give thine heart unto NO man unto whom thou canst not forgive all things—even his SAINTLINESS on the Morning After!

* * *

For lo, it is easy for a doting woman to forgive her Beloved for his big sins and sometimes, for his little follies. But the "stained glass" attitude, wherewith he "repenteth," who can BEAR it?

HELEN ROWLAND

Behold, while the game lasteth, and the wine floweth, and the flappers flatter him, a woman's pleadings are but "nagging" in a man's ears. And all her tears serve only to wash away his love.

* * *

But when the sport hath lost its zest, and the wine is on the lees, and he hath wearied of Other Women, and his head is a thing of pain, then doth he perceive the error of his ways, and return to the straight and narrow path.

* * *

Then doth he seek his Beloved, but NOT with humility and meekness and ashes upon his head.

* * *

Nay, verily. He cometh unto her, not as a penitent, but with felicitations and wreathed smiles and laurels in his hair, as one who might say:

"Look who's here, thou Lucky Little Woman!

"Come, greet me with kisses and cover me with praises. For, lo, I have decided to be GOOD! Let us kill the fatted pullet, and rejoice!"

* * *

And behold, if she welcometh him not with hallelujahs and open arms and hymns of praise and thanksgiving, he is crestfallen beyond measure and filled with astonishment.

Yea, he IS wroth! For who is so filled with virtue and puffed up with self-righteousness, as a man who hath JUST decided to "reform"?

* * *

Who is so patronizing as a man that hath turned over a new leaf and is filled with good resolutions?

* * *

And if the woman falleth not upon his neck with rejoicing, then is he moved to reproach her, saying:

"Oh, VERY well!

"Thou art smaller than a restaurant prune and more unresponsive than a frozen engine, and the virtue of a GOOD man is wasted upon thee!"

Go to. Let no damsel wed a man unto whom she cannot forgive all things, unto seven times seven times—even his sanctimony in the hour of his "repentance!"

* * *

For, verily, verily, then is FORGIVENESS the acid test of LOVE!

Dumb Dora

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your column for some time, but this is the first time I have come to you for advice. I am a girl in my teens and go to high school. This is my problem. A couple of weeks ago I was at my girl friend's house and there I met two fellows whom I shall call Tom and Harry. Both of them go to school. We had a nice time. Then my girl friend and the two fellows took me home. I didn't see them for a couple of weeks. Every time they saw my girl friend they asked about me. The other week I went to see this girl friend. Tom and Harry also came up. We started to play a game about closing the lights. It was just innocent fun. All of a sudden when the lights were out, Tom came over and kissed me. It was so sudden and unexpected that I didn't even realize. I don't think the others knew. My girl friend is rather fast a little. Later I had a little dispute with Harry, and when going home he asked me to forgive him, which I did. On the way home he told me of the different types of girls he goes with. He laughed at some of the girls being so fast. The way he talked it seemed as if he doesn't respect that kind of girls. Now, what shall I do when I let his boy friend, Tom, kiss me without meaning. I felt rather ashamed of myself when I looked Tom in the face. I seem to like Harry, but I think Tom will tell him about kissing me, and he won't respect me any more. How can I get better acquainted with Harry, as I like him a great deal. Oh, Miss Gale, it certainly doesn't pay to pet. Please help me, as I want to be respected. I will sign myself Dumb Dora, for I should have known better.
DUMB DORA.

This boy shouldn't have kissed you, of course, but he can hardly tell his friend that you are a petter, so don't worry about it. Be friendly and interested in the one you like, and he will like you, too.

Unhappy

DEAR MISS GALE:

Oh, what shall I do? I am a girl 19 years old and the oldest at home. I am not allowed out. The more I ask my father the worse it gets. Recently my club had a meeting at church. Of course, I thought I was allowed to go so I got ready. When I came down stairs my father got up and gave me a beating. Oh, Miss Gale, I cried for two hours. I thought my heart would break. Now, Miss Gale, don't tell me that my parents know best for I know they don't, for I am not even allowed to speak to boys I have known for years. I have two married sisters who tell mother that a single girl should stay at home so, of course, mother listens to them. I can't go out on a sly for we all have to be home at 7:30. Oh, you readers, won't you please help me for I don't know what to do. I am old enough and surely can take care of myself. Hoping to see this in print soon and wishing you oceans of luck.
UNHAPPY.

I certainly see no reason why you shouldn't have been permitted to go to your club party, my dear. You are old enough to go out occasionally. I would never advise a girl to leave her home, but certainly a father who really beats his daughter can expect neither love nor respect from her. Wait a while longer and see if conditions don't get better.

Katherine

DEAR MISS GALE:

A few years ago I graduated from college. My mother put me through. Now I have fallen in love and want to be married. My mother is willing but declares she will not come and live with me, but that she will work and earn her own living. I have two brothers, but mother couldn't depend on them. Even if they would make a home for her they may marry and then she will carry out her intention of working. Do I owe it to my mother to stay with her to repay her for what she has done for me? I feel that I do. If I would marry I couldn't stand the reproach of her working. If I don't marry I shall be miserable. I am very unhappy. What shall I do?
KATHERINE.

If your mother is strong and has some interesting work she would like to do, I see no reason for you giving up your marriage on that account, my dear. You do not say if her declaration was made as a threat or whether she really wants to go out in the world. Perhaps that appeals to her now that he children are grown.

Wondering

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a young girl who lives in a small town where everybody knows everybody else's business. For nearly a year I have been traveling around with a boy of different nationality. He is a very nice boy and treats me wonderfully. He attended college and while he was there I was very much teased about his nationality. He is home now and has asked me a few times for a date. But I am inclined to refuse him even though I do love him. Would you go with him even though your friends ridicule him, or would you stop now before the affair gets serious.
WONDERING.

I see no harm in accepting this boy's friendship. You need not marry him, you know, but if you like each other it would be all right to see him occasionally.

Sally

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a young lady, not bad looking, but somehow or other the boys don't take a liking to me. Other girls, friends of mine, are just as old as I am and it seems the boys take a liking to them and not me. That's funny. I think I am just as good as them. What do you think is the cause of this?
SALLY.

The "I-am-as-good-as-you-are" attitude is not a friendly one, and if you carry it into your friendships with boys it is small wonder that they don't like you very well. Be more comradely and I am sure you will get along better.

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 5

There is but one Temple in the Universe, and that is the body of man.—CARLYLE.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds presage of benefits for mystical, church and benevolent bodies but warns of sublety and secret machinations. Be cautious in all affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a fairly progressive year, especially in new undertakings, but be on guard against duplicity, and sign papers with more than ordinary precaution: also in matters of personal relations.

A child born on this day should have talents in some singular direction, which may bring eminence, but it may be subject to sudden and abrupt visitations and sinister attacks in life.

Monday, February 6

Although the lunar configurations point to certain small anxieties in the employment or in the making of contracts, yet mutual figures show benefits and happy readjustments in this particular. Literary adventures should prosper, to a modified degree as well as all pertaining to writings, publishings, etc.

Those whose birthday it is may have some small anxieties during the year, in connection with employment, but these will be happily readjusted and all affairs should thrive and bring happiness, especially all pertaining to writing.

Cultivate Your Knees For Beauty

By MARIE JERITZA

NOW and then, persistent rumors predict the return of the ankle-length skirt. But these rumors have failed to materialize. And meanwhile knees continue to be much in evidence. Lucky is the woman with knees so symmetrical and softly rounded, that she need not feel self-conscious in her abbreviated bathing suit, or dread frocks which reveal her silk-clad knees.

The vogue of revealed knees calls for more than usual attention to correct posture. A woman, for instance, who seems a lady judging by her face, coiffure, and the carriage of her head, may suggest a vulgarian by sprawled angles of her knees and feet. Breeding is revealed by posture fully as much as by actions, and the importance of correct posture cannot be over-emphasized in this era of the short skirt.

It is easy to appear ridiculous through careless placing of feet and knees. When seated, the knees should never be spread, and the feet should be kept together. It is quite graceful and correct to cross the feet at the ankles. Knees crossed are also permissible, provided the upper leg is not raised too high or pushed too far forward. But it is wiser and more discreet to avoid this somewhat questionable posture.

We are frequently warned against vanity. Yet may not vanity have its advantages? I suggest to every woman, the advisability of making her mirror her friend and "severest critic."

Practice sitting before your full-length mirror in various positions in each of your frocks. You will soon see which positions are graceful, which grotesque. Then practice the best positions so constantly that they will become a habit.

Here are a few hints for the woman who would improve the contour of her knees:

Wearing spindle heels for street and every-day use will force your knees forward and make them bumpy. Keep to comfortable, moderate-heeled shoes with flexible arches, except for dress wear, if you would have symmetrical, graceful knees.

Round garters disfigure the legs above the knees, enlarge them and may cause broken veins. Wear comfortable girdle-style hose supporters.

Jumping the rope, swimming and dancing are excellent for knee symmetry. So is the following exercise:

Stand straight with your feet close together, your toes facing straight ahead, your weight over the balls of your feet. Lift your right leg, bent and relaxed at the knee, to hip level. Now straighten your leg until your toes are on a level with your hip.

From this position swing your foreleg back and forth on your knee as axis, 10 times. Next, swing it in the same way on your knee pivot, from right to left as far as you can 10 times and finally circle your right foreleg on your knee as pivot 10 times to the right, then 10 times to the left. Return to first position.

Repeat the entire exercise the same number of times, lifting your left instead of right knee. Be sure to maintain physical poise and balance while you practice these exercises.

Exquisite knees are very rare, even among professional beauties. Yet they may be cultivated by proper posture, exercise, and intelligent care of the body.

Ginger Cookies

Beat one level teaspoonful and three-quarters of baking soda into a cupful of molasses. Add a cupful of sour milk, a half cupful of melted butter and lard mixed, a level teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonful of ginger. Mix well, then sift in enough flour to make the dough the right consistency to drop from the spoon. Let stand two hours in a cool place, then put half on a board, roll thin and cut with a floured cutter. When all are cut do the same with the other half of the dough. Bake on a buttered shallow pan in a medium oven.

"Lindy" Takes Off for Paris; Fog and Sleet Over Ocean

Decision to "Hop" Sudden and He Moved Swiftly Out Over the Blue

The cross-country flight from the Pacific Coast to Curtiss Field on Long Island was the subject of Col. Lindbergh's chapter of the story of "We" published yesterday in the Sun-Telegraph. He told of the final careful tests made of the Spirit of St. Louis, all of which were satisfactory; of the close watch for suitable weather conditions, and his arrival at the station from which he was to take off for the great adventure.

Alone Over Ocean at Night

By COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

AT NEW YORK we checked over the plane, engine and instruments, which required several short flights over the field.

When the plane was completely inspected and ready for the trans-Atlantic flight, there were dense fogs reported along the coast and over Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, in addition to a storm area over the North Atlantic.

On the morning of May 19th a light rain was falling and the sky was overcast. Weather reports from land stations and ships along the great circle course were unfavorable, and there was apparently no prospect of taking off for Paris for several days at least. In the morning I visited the Wright plant at Paterson, N. J., and had planned to attend a theater performance in New York that evening.

But at about 6 o'clock I received a special report from the New York weather bureau. A high pressure area over the entire North Atlantic and low pressure over Nova Scotia and Newfoundland was receding. It was apparent that the prospects of the fog clearing up were as good as I might expect for some time to come. The North Atlantic should be clear with only local storms on the coast of Europe.

Decision to "Hop Off"

The moon had just passed full and the percentage of days with fog over Newfoundland and the Grand Banks was increasing so that there seemed to be no advantage in waiting longer.

We went to Curtiss Field as quickly as possible and made arrangements for the barograph to be sealed and installed, and for the plane to be serviced and checked.

We decided partially to fill the fuel tanks in the hangar before towing the ship on a truck to Roosevelt Field, which adjoins Curtiss Field on the east, where the servicing would be completed.

I left the responsibility for conditioning the plane in the hands of the men on the field, while I went into the hotel for about two and one-half hours of rest; but at the hotel there were several more details which had to be completed, and I was unable to get any sleep that night.

I returned to the field before daybreak on the morning of the 20th. A light rain was falling, which continued until almost dawn. Consequently we did not move the ship to Roosevelt Field until much later than we had planned, and the take-off was delayed from daybreak until nearly 8 o'clock.

The Start for Paris

At dawn the shower had passed, although the sky was overcast, and occasionally there would be some slight precipitation. The tail of the plane was lashed to a truck and escorted by a number of motorcycle police. The slow trip from Curtiss to Roosevelt Field was begun.

The ship was placed at the extreme west end of the field, heading along the east and west runway, and the final fueling commenced.

About 7:40 a. m. the motor was started and at 7:52 I took off on the flight for Paris.

The field was a little soft due to the rain during the night and the heavily loaded plane gathered speed very slowly. After passing the half-way mark, however, it was apparent that I would be able to clear the obstructions at the end. I passed over a tractor by about 15 feet and a telephone line by about 20, with a fair reserve of flying speed. I believe that the ship would have taken off from a hard field with at least 500 pounds more weight.

I turned slightly to the right to avoid some high trees on a hill directly ahead, but by the time I had gone a few hundred yards I had sufficient altitude to clear all obstructions and throttle the engine down to 1750 R.P.M.

Ice and Fog

I took up a compass course at once and soon reached Long Island Sound, where the Curtiss Oriole, with its photographer, which had been escorting me, turned back.

The haze soon cleared and from Cape Cod through the southern half of Nova Scotia the weather and visibility were excellent. I was flying very low, sometimes as close as 10 feet from the trees and water.

On the 300-mile stretch of water between Cape Cod and Nova Scotia I passed within view of numerous fishing vessels.

The northern part of Nova Scotia contained a number of storm areas and several times I flew through cloudbursts.

As I neared the northern coast snow appeared in patches on the ground and far to the eastward the coastline was covered with fog.

For many miles between Nova Scotia and Newfoundland the ocean was covered with caked ice, but as I approached the coast the ice disappeared entirely and I saw several ships in this area.

I had taken up a course for St. Johns, which is south of the great circle from New York to Paris, so that there would be no question of the fact that I passed Newfoundland in case I was forced down in the North Atlantic.

I passed over numerous icebergs after Leaving St. Johns, but saw no ships except near the coast.

Darkness set in about 8:15, New York time, and a thin, low fog formed, through which the white bergs showed up with surprising clearness. This fog became thicker and increased in height until, within two hours, I was just skimming the top of storm clouds at about 10,000 feet. Even at this altitude there was a thick haze, through which only the stars directly overhead could be seen.

Out of the Night

There was no moon and it was very dark. The tops of some of the storm clouds were several thousand feet above me, and at one time, when I attempted to fly through one of the larger clouds, sleet started to collect on my plane and I was forced to turn around and get back into clear air immediately and then fly around any clouds which I could not get over.

The moon appeared on the horizon after about two hours of darkness; then the flying was much less complicated.

Dawn came at about 1 a. m., New York time, and the temperature had risen until there was practically no remaining danger of sleet.

Shortly after sunrise the clouds became more broken, although some of them were far above me, and it was often necessary to fly through them, navigating by instruments only.

As the sun became higher, holes appeared in the fog. Through one the open water was visible, and I dropped down until less than a hundred feet above the waves. There was a strong wind blowing from the northwest and the ocean was covered with white caps.

After a few miles of fairly clear weather the ceiling lowered to zero, and for nearly two hours I flew entirely blind through the fog at an altitude of about 1,500 feet. Then the fog raised and the water was visible again.

(In the great Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow Col. Lindbergh will complete his description of his flight over the ocean, the sighting of land and his arrival at Le Bourget Field, Paris.)

GUARD KILLED, CONVICT SHOT IN DASH

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 4—(AP.)—Joseph H. Tinney, 42, a deputy keeper at the state prison here, is dead; Harry Baxter, a long-term convict with several aliases, is dying and Frank Wunkowski, another convict, is in solitary confinement as a result of an attempt by the two prisoners to shoot their way to liberty early today.

The finding of a crude bomb in the prison yard at a point near where the prisoners attempted to scale the wall and the report that an automobile sped away from Federal street when guards showered the convicts with bullets, led prison officials to believe that the men had outside aid.

The break for liberty was made just as the prisoners were being marched into the dining room for breakfast.

Just as the cell doors were opened a shot rang out and Tinney staggered to the center desk, yelling: "They've got me, boys—look out."

Then he dropped to the floor, dead.

The man in charge of the center desk immediately sounded an emergency call and a few minutes later men on duty in the towers spotted the men scurrying across the fog-filled yard and opened fire.

Both convicts were armed with automatic pistols and returned the fire.

Wunkowski first attempted to scale the wall, after tossing a line over it.

Just as liberty seemed within his grasp, a policeman, attracted by the prison siren, arrived. He fired a shot at Wunkowski's head and the prisoner dropped back into the yard, ran into the prison and handed his weapon to Center Keeper McChesney.

After Wunkowski had given up the attempt, Baxter attempted to scale the wall. He was nearly half way to the top when he suddenly moaned: "It's all over with me," and dropped to the ground.

He was taken to the prison hospital where it was found that he had two wounds through the right chest and another through the lower abdomen. His condition is grave.

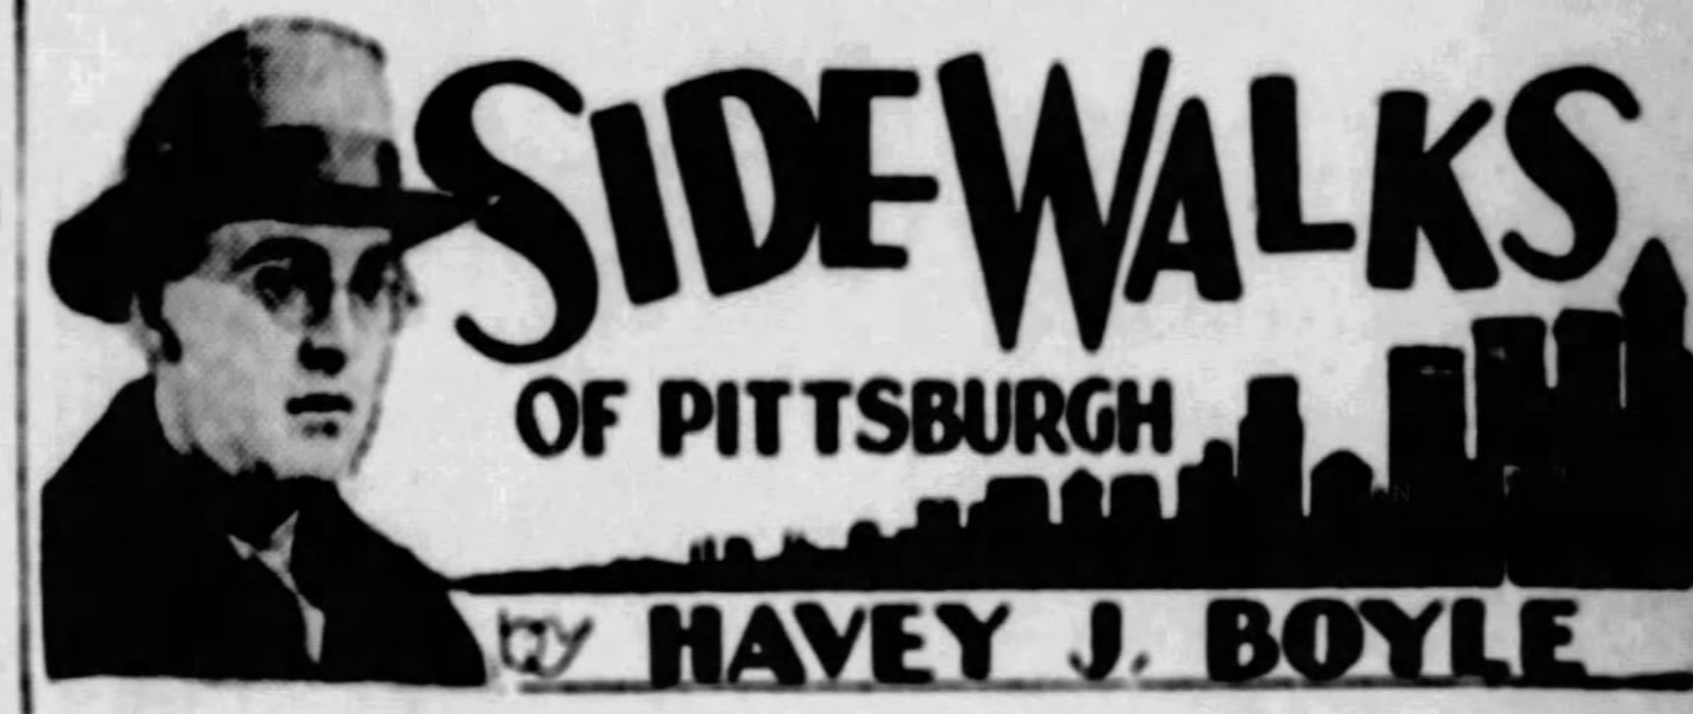
Perfuming little dogs—that's only one of the fads of Mlle. Maud Loty, about whose eccentricities an interesting story has been woven. It will appear in The American Weekly of tomorrow's Sun-Tele.



THIS is a letter from a bootlegger to a customer in Pittsburgh. For obvious reasons the names are deleted. Nevertheless the letter is authentic.

"Dear Friend: Wish I was leaving Sunday for your burg, but the old river is so bad that we just can't make it now. Everything was all set for this morning and this storm came up. The ice is fine as far as thickness is concerned, but it has been broke up and then froze again so that it is like the house that Jack built and there isn't a chance of walking over it.

"Last Monday or Tuesday, the day before you called, I was talking to a custom man on the railroad bridge and he said he would fix it for me on the bridge. I was to see him today, which I did, and unfortunately they are having a searching hour on the bridge each day and they don't know when that hour is, so that will hold me up for another week.

"I am going down to ——— and see what I can do there. About all you can do is to keep on trying. I've had 'twenty-five' laying over in Canada ever since Christmas. I've made a few trips the old way which no one knows about, but that is very bad. Another slip and it means six months. So unless I make good tomorrow it will be another week or 10 days before I shove off."

The letter, as you will realise, shows what caution and what thoroughness the profession of bootician imposes on the practitioner.

As one who picked Dempsey to defeat Tunney in the first engagement, as one who selected Sharkey to beat Dempsey, and as one who figured the Pirates ought to beat the Yankees our prediction about the Pittsburgh site for a landing field ought to be highly interesting to those who favor it.

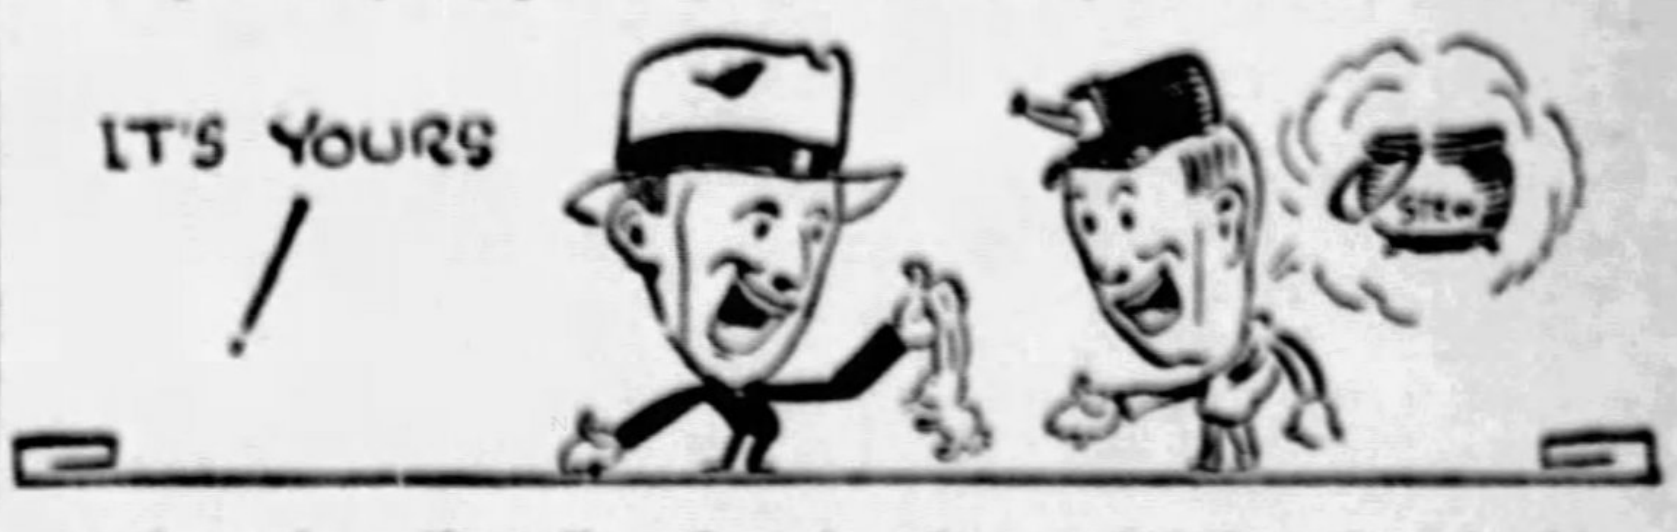
IT IS a splendid piece of work Howard Thurston, the well-known magician, is doing to aid the striking coal miners. It is reported by his publicity man that every rabbit Mr. Thurston produces from the collar of a miner is awarded the miner for his evening stew.



The only time we ever doubted Mr. Thurston's occult powers was the evening of a little dinner in Pittsburgh, after which he had considerable difficulty finding his hat.

The ace of hearts was in his knee joint, there was a flock of pigeons in his hip pocket, to say nothing of a bowl of goldfish in his coat-tail, but his hat was nowhere in sight.

A Christmas Gift From Drummond Adds to Lilly's Woe's

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

LILLY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, is engaged to marry STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. She is fond of him, but realizes she does not really love him the day after she accepts him, when she becomes instantly and violently infatuated with a taxicab driver whom she sees down town when she goes to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. Forgetting all about Sue, she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSON. She marries Pat. Lily tried, and their domestic ship sailed smoother for a few months. One day Lily met SUE CAIN, an old friend, on the street. Sue invited her to a card party. Lily, without funds, went to a store and tried to charge some clothes to her father. She was informed her mother had left word that "Mrs. Patrick France could not charge things to Mr. Lexington." Staley Drummond has been buying her clothes and furs and tries to persuade her to divorce Pat and marry him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"IT'S ALL right! It's nothing," he said to her, and walked into the living room, still holding his arm above the elbow.

A few minutes afterward Lily heard him go out of the house. He came home an hour and a half later in a taxicab, and his face was white to the lips.

"The Doc set it again. I've been down to the hospital," he said, barely looking at her.

"Did I break it with that bottle?" Lily asked, wringing her hands in agony that was absolutely real. "Did I? Oh, Pat, tell me I didn't."

"Don't think about it," was all Pat would answer.

It was almost Christmas before he could use his arm at all again.

* * *

It was on the afternoon of Christmas eve that Lily had the surprise of her life.

It came in the late afternoon mail—the surprise—and it was from Staley Drummond.

It was a white pasteboard box, and tied around it, under the tissue paper wrappings, was one of Staley's cards with a message dashed across it in his handwriting:

"This is to count the hours until we are together."

Feeling slightly dazed, Lily opened the box. Within it was a watch—the kind that is called a "sports" watch. It was of green enamel, starred with chip diamonds, and there was a little diamond clasp on the end of the chain.

The sight of it and of the note brought Lily to her senses. . . . Staley had not understood, from the letter she had written him weeks before, that she had definitely given him up! Evidently he was still expecting her to leave the flat as soon as Pat was better!

She remembered nothing of the letter except the last line she had written: "So I have changed all of my plans."

She stood, looking out of the window at the cold gray sky and the tossing branches of the bare black trees.

"He thinks I meant that my plans were changed just for the time while Pat wasn't able to take care of himself," she figured it all out—and all at once she knew that she was glad he thought that.

"He still wants me," she said to herself. "I won't spoil Pat's Christmas by telling him I'm going to leave him—but I'll just go, day after tomorrow."

CHAPTER XLIV.

THE chances are that Lily never would have left Pat if it had not been for that little green watch, with her initials "L. L." upon it in chip diamonds.

For it is one thing for a woman to make up her mind to give up her husband—as she had been doing for months—and it is quite another thing to actually do it.

Even now, as she stood in the gray afternoon light, looking down at the tiny jeweled thing in her hands, she wondered if she really would be happy with Staley when she was married to him.

She knew she would be rich. She knew she could be idle and fairly lapped in luxury. She knew that Staley adored her with the blind adoration that a middle-aged man very often has for a very young woman.

But wouldn't there be times when she would tire of that love? Wouldn't there be times when she would long for Pat and his young, strong affection for her? Wouldn't there be times when she would be sick for the sound of his voice and the look in his eyes? She knew there would, and she sighed as she laid the watch back in its little satin-covered box.

In the kitchen the clock struck five. It was time to put the supper on—the last one she would ever cook in the little flat, perhaps.

Tears came welling up into her eyes, and her throat ached as she went through the half-clean little rooms and lit the gas stove. In the ice-box was a bowl of cold vegetable soup, with a thick layer of grease over the top. Beside it was a plate of raw calves' liver waiting to be cooked the way Pat liked it, smothered in onions.

But there were no onions.

Lily looked everywhere, but there wasn't so much as the whiff of one in the kitchen.

"That means I've got to stop everything and go out and buy some," she sighed dismally. For Pat, like most men, had to have his food just the way he liked it or he wouldn't eat it. And liver and onions was his favorite dish.

Lily hated it. Not only did she hate the taste of it, but she loathed the red, shiny look of the raw liver and the smell of the onions, to say nothing of the way they made her eyes water when she peeled them.

"Oh, well, what's the difference? I won't have to peel many more of them," she said to herself, putting on her hat and coat before her dressing table mirror.

The little coin purse in her handbag was empty, and with a groan Lily flung it down upon the dresser. . . . No money! Not a cent! Not a single penny. She remembered, then, she had spent all she had the day before on Christmas wreaths for the windows.

"What a life!" she thought, as she flung herself out of the house. "No money for anything—not even 5 cents for a few onions. And Roy Jetterson giving Pat only half of his salary because he is laid up!" What a nit-wit Pat was to stand for it!

Slamming the door behind her, she started down the stairs and down the streets towards the France family's little grocery store, four long blocks away. At least she could charge things there—

"And I'll telephone my mother, too," she decided, forgetting how angry she was with her mother for closing her charge account at Angouleme's shop. "I'll tell her she can expect me home day after tomorrow."

She was sure that her mother would take her back when she knew that she was coming back for the purpose of getting a divorce from Pat.

The little grocery store, which was always as clean as Mrs. France's own kitchen, was very bright and cheery on this particular Christmas eve, with its barrels of cranberries glistening like rubies, its great wooden boxes of holly, its bunch of mistletoe hanging in the windows, and the holly wreaths in the lighted windows casting shadows on the sidewalks without.

Behind the counter Pat's mother, in her black dress and crisp white apron, was dropping Christmas cookies into a bag. She looked up brightly when Lily opened the door, her blue eyes shining in the sparkling electric lights just above her.

"Well, you just missed Pat!" she said, pushing her steel-rimmed spectacles up on her forehead so that she could see more clearly. She always said she couldn't really see people through those glasses.

"He stopped in with Roy and Sadye Jetterson for a minute," she went on, in her quick way. "And I sent you a little box of fruit cake."

"Nice of you," Lily answered, absently. "Was he going straight home?"

And then, like a flash, she thought of something she had left at home—the green watch and Staley Drummond's card on the living room table! She clapped her hand to her mouth and a look of real fear came into her eyes.

"Oh, my soul and body!" she gasped aloud, to the amazement of Pat's mother, who stared at her with wide-open eyes as she fairly fell backward out of the store.

There was a barrel of onions just outside the store, flanked by a barrel of potatoes and one of Hubbard squash. But she did not even see them, as she started back over the road that led to the flat. . . . Oh, if only Pat had stopped off at the Jetterson's for a minute! Just long enough to let her get home ahead of him and put that green watch and Staley Drummond's card out of sight! If only he had—

"Please don't let him see that card!" Lily found herself actually praying in her heart, as she flew along over the sidewalks, her breath coming thick and fast, and her feet aching in their thin high-heeled slippers that had not been made for speed or comfort.

She knew then, as she never had known before, really, how much Pat meant to her. . . . Why, how could she ever have dreamed of leaving him, when the mere thought of his finding out about Staley was so terrifying a thought to her?

The Jetterson's car was not parked in front of the apartment when she turned into the street from the corner, and Lily breathed a sharp sigh of relief.

Taking them two steps at a time, she rushed up the stairs of the building and unlocked the door of her own suite on the second floor.

And then, in that tiny second, as she stood on the threshold, she saw just what happened.

Pat had been home for some minutes before he saw the card. For he had had time to take off his coat and hat and hang them up. They were nowhere in sight, and he had even filled his pipe and lighted it. It lay on the table before him as he stood, holding the watch and the card in his hand. . . . the card with its tell-tale message scrawled across the back of it!

He evidently had just picked it up, for when Lily opened the door he was turning it over to see the name that was engraved upon the other side of it.

With a cry she rushed to him and tore it out of his hands.

"Don't look at it! Don't look at it!" she cried out to him. "It doesn't mean a thing to me. It doesn't—I give you my word that it doesn't!" She began to tear the thin little piece of pasteboard into bits.

Pat looked at her, not coldly, but as if he were looking straight into her soul, at all the deceit and lies of the last two or three months. He smiled for a second.

"Your word, Lily?" he asked, quietly. "I wonder how much your word means." He looked down at the watch that glittered in the light like a baleful green eye.

"You couldn't have been very honest with me all these months you've been living with me," he went on, slowly and deliberately, "or you wouldn't have been seeing so much of Drummond that he's beginning to 'count the hours until you are together.'" His lip curled as he quoted the words Staley had written on the card.

He flung the little watch down upon the table where he had found it and walked out of the room.

Lily followed him into the kitchen. He was standing at the window, with his back to the room, staring out into darkness. He did not move when she came up behind him and stood close to him.

"Pat," she said, "I have played around with Staley. There's no use denying it, but—"

He turned on her then. "Don't talk to me about what you've been doing!" he said to her, with fury in his voice and his face. "But when you are with Drummond, as you want to be evidently, just tell him for me that your initials are not 'L. L.,' will you? You still are my wife, even if you are a poor kind of one!"

Lily sank to her knees on the floor. "Pat, don't talk to me like that!" she wailed, beginning to cry. She dropped her head in her hands, and her voice came broken and muffled. "Pat, I've tried to be a good wife. I've tried to cook and make beds and scrub for you. And it was so awful. How can you blame me for wanting to have a little fun?" Even then she did not see the thing she had done as he saw it. She had just been "having a little fun" with Staley Drummond.

"I know that 'way down deep in my heart I never meant to go away from you, Pat," she sobbed on. "I just played with the idea when I was tired and bored and blue—" She stopped talking. Pat had walked around her and gone back to the front of the house.

She sat there for a few minutes longer on the floor, looking around the little kitchen that had been the scene of so much of her struggle with housework.

On the drain board was the bowl full of cold soup that she had taken from the ice-box to heat for supper. Beside it was the despised calves' liver.

"How glad I would be to fix it for Pat now," she thought, "nasty as it is—"

The childish silly thought brought her to her feet, and carried her into the living room, where Pat sat, with the evening paper up before his face, apparently reading it as peacefully as if nothing had happened.

She looked at it for a minute or two before she spoke. "Do you want something to eat?" she asked, then, timidly.

There was no answer.

"Is there anything you'd like? A glass of milk or some crackers?" she went on. Pat had been eating very lightly during the long weeks while his broken arm healed.

He put his paper down then, with a rustle, and looked at her.

"I'm waiting for you to go," he said bluntly.

And so the little green watch had finally settled the question.

CHAPTER XLV.

LILY shook her head unbelievingly. "You don't mean it, Pat?" she half whispered. "You don't mean that you truly want me to go—away from you?"

He just looked at her.

Then he raised his paper once more in his hands and began to read it—or at least to look at it.

The room was very still—so still that the sound of an automobile stopping in the street seemed very, very loud.

The door banged in the vestibule below, and then steps came up the stairs. A knock souonded on the door.

Pat got up and opened it. And there stood Sayde Jetterson, smiling from ear to ear, and draped with two large, long silver fox furs. Gorgeous ones, with big fluffy brushes.

I mean what on EARTH could I SAY? HONestly, I was emBARrassed to SOBS, no less, because I felt AWfully sort of SORry for him because I mean he's been THROUGH a LOT, my dear, on MY account but after ALL, that's LIFE, isn't it, I s'pose? I mean when you can't LOVE someone who loves YOU it's awfully tragic, sort of, for THEM, my dear, though it m be just a JOKE to YOU, do you know what I mean? Gosh, I sort of WONder what it's all aBOUT because HALF the time life doesn't make SENSE, do you really think it DOES, my dear? But I ACtually thought I'd have hysTERics, my dear, because ARab was sort of philOSophizing about how TIME heals all WOUNDS and, my dear, it was only last WEEK that he had his big SORrow—can you BEAR it? I mean I HONestly think he MIGHT have more consideration for my FEELings than to get OVer it as quick as THAT, my dear—I mean I ACtually DO!"

Mary Defiant of Noel's Objection to Her Interest in the Stranger

MARY HARRISON never had looked so attractive as she did when she uttered her defiance to Noel Veritzen upon the subject of the young man with the wolfhound whose admiration of her had so disturbed the young violinist. With her slender rounded arms akimbo in burlesqued imitation of a scolding fishwife, with her lovely head cocked a little to one side and her laughing, mutinous eyes fixed upon his she was a picture calculated to make any youth with red blood in his veins experience the wild desire to shake her soundly and then kiss her with equal fervor.

The desire for both actions was openly mirrored in Noel's expressive countenance. It appeared to me that a diversion of any sort would be wise and I promptly supplied it.

"This academic discussion is all very well," I laughed, "but it isn't getting us anywhere. Noel, would you mind giving a look at the car? Mary, I think you'd better get your motor coat. It's pretty dusty on the road."

Mary dropped me a courtesy, her finger to her chin, in the manner of a bashful kindergarten youngster.

"In other words, 'Mary, get-to-Patchogue-out-o' here and stop your foolishness,'" she said impudently. "All right, I'll be a good, sweet, dear, little Victorian damsel all the rest of the day. If I even hear the name of that naughty young man with the wolfhound, I'll cover my face."

She danced out of the room, and when she had gone Noel gave a sigh which appeared to have its source in his heels, and which made it difficult for me to preserve a straight face.

"Mrs. Graham!" he stammered, "do you think—it isn't possible that she is—interested—in that—" he hesitated for an epithet—finally decided upon the innocuous word "stranger?"

I struggled with the impulse to give him a sharp retort—finally decided that he needed it.

"Come outside to the car, and I'll answer your question," I said, for I meant to take no chance of anyone's overhearing my words.

He followed me docilely outside, and when I had run the car out of the garage, I beckoned him to a seat beside me.

"Of course, looking at the car was but a pretense," I said. "Mary was fancying herself altogether too much in her defiant role."

He made me no answer, but his eyes betrayed that he was vividly remembering that exquisitely lovely picture.

"And now, I will answer your question," I went on, feeling, however, a strong misgiving at the advice I was about to give the youth. I felt as if I were holding a lighted match too near an explosive.

"In the first place," I said, "Mary isn't any more interested in the young man with the wolfhound than any normal young girl is in any personable young man appearing on her horizon. But if you persist in your present attitude you are going to pave the way for a very lively interest in him or any other good-looking and well-bred young man who happens along."

He looked at me in openmouthed astonishment.

"Do you mean because I called him a bounder?" he asked.

"Partly that," I said, "and partly because you are giving Mary the idea that you have no other goddesses before her."

SPORT COMMENT

by

JAMES J. LONG

ALL that has been said and and written about Hughey Jennings as a ball player since the death of the veteran in Scranton this week does not even begin to show how really great he was in his heyday as a shortstop, according to Honus Wagner, the former Pirate star.

Honus Wagner.

And no higher tribute has been paid to Jennings as a player by any one than Wagner himself pays in saying that Hughey was the model he used in developing his own system of playing shortstop.

Wagner was a pretty fair sort shortstop himself, if memory serves, and when he admits that he learned a lot of his stuff by watching Jennings and practicing plays which the latter invented, it just about proves that Hughey was the greatest shortstop in baseball up to the time of Wagner.

"UNQUESTIONABLY, Jennings was one of the greatest shortstops that ever lived," said Wagner, "and in my opinion there was no one to compare with him while he was at his best on the old Baltimore National League club.

Hughey Jennings.

"Many a play I learned by watching Jennings, who was always thinking a season or two ahead of the other shortstops of his time and continually springing something new.

"And I wasn't playing shortstop when I watched him, at that. I was playing the outfield for Louisville the greater part of time in 1897, 1898 and 1899 when I played against Jennings, but I was quick to admire his skill around the shortfield and the way he made plays that no one else attempted. That caused me to watch him closely, and whatver success I had when I was moved to shortstop later was due largely to what I had learned by keeping an eye on Hughey and studying the plays he made.

"ONE play that he invented proved his skill and speed.

"With a runner on first making a start for second as soon as the ball left the pitcher's hand, the result often being that the hit-and-run play would be worked successfully, with the batter driving the ball right through the spot vacated by the shortstop.

"Jennings invented a way to beat that hit-and-run play. Instead of starting for second as soon as the pitcher delivered the ball, he would remain in his position until the ball was either hit by the batter or passed him into the catcher's hands.

"If it was a hit to short, Jennings was there to field it, and if it got past the batter Hughey would dart over to second in time

DODGERS MAY BUY CUMBERLAND CLUB

CUMBERLAND, Md., Feb. 4.—James F. McGuire, president of the Mid-City Association, which controls the Cumberland Colts, Middle-Atlantic League Baseball Club, left for Pittsburgh this morning where he was to meet Honus Wagner of that city and Phil Wall of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, who are reported interested in the purchase of the Colts.

If the club is sold to the Pittsburgh-Brooklyn pair, the franchise will be transferred to McKeesport and will be used as a farm by the GAMES TONIGHT.

N. Y. Rangers at Pittsburgh.

Detroit at Toronto.

By CARL W. SHATTO.

THE two mightiest forces in the National League today, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Rangers, will come together at Duquesne Garden at 8:30 o'clock tonight and students interested in the ancient and intriguing question of "what would happen were an irresistible force to meet in immovable object" would do well to attend. Since turning into the second half in the league race, the Pirates have set such a blistering pace that only the Rangers have been able to match their stride, and when these fast-going sextets clash here tonight—well, don't forget your smelling salts.

In their recent drive toward a playoff berth the Bucs have shown surprising power. Ottawa, Boston and Les Canadiens are numbered among their latest victims and they now would own a fairly lengthy victory string had not the Rangers tripped them up in New York. To be painfully frank about it, the Pirates haven't beaten the Rangers this season, something worthy of comment in that they and the Detroit Cougars are the only clubs to

M'KECHNIE FETE BIG SUCCESS

Home friends of William (Bill) McKechnie, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, tendered Skipper Bill a touching testimonial last night in Wilkinsburg. The affair, given under the auspices of the Bible Class of the Mifflin Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of Wilkinsburg, was held in the auditorium of the church.

In responding to the well wishes of his neighbors, McKechnie was in fine form. Bill gave an interesting talk on the history of baseball since its start, his discussion being interspered with amusing anecdotes that brought down the house.

The big assemblage was put in fine fettle for the speaking and other entertaining features by partaking of a sumptuous oyster supper. After the various courses had been served, Toastmaster J. C. McQuiston, who like Skipper Bill is a member of the Bible Class of the church, took charge of the program. Mac was a fine interlocutor.

Rosy Rowswell, intimate friend of McKechnie and a real big-leaguer in an entertaining way, was in one of the cleanup notches of the batting order. Rosy gets a lot of stuff on his fast one, he has the control of an Alexander and the humor of a Grimm or an Altrock.

And there was more than baseball to excite the throng. Karl E. Davis, graduate manager of Pitt, and Clarence (Buddy) Overend,

BUSCH MAY HAVE LOCAL MARATHON FOEMEN

By HARRY KECK.
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

NOT one but likely three or four runners from this district will be starters in C. C. Pyle's Coast-to-Coast Marathon race from Los Angeles to New York, starting March 4 and ending some 60 to 65 days later.

Bill Busch, who made the jaunt by himself last fall just to see if he could do it, is the most notable entry from Pittsburgh and vicinity, of course. He will take off early tomorrow from Union Station California-bound. He will stop at the Elks' Home in Los Angeles and go through a special training siege to prepare himself for the grind.

Bill Busch.

Coincident with the departure of Busch, it is learned that Rod V. Ellsworth, aged 28, of Monongahela City, already is well on his way to the starting point of the race and that Anthony Selick, 19, of 1242 Spring Garden avenue, North Side, is contemplating entering, with the consent of his parents, and that H. A. McEwan of 3 Brightridge extension, North Side, also has made inquiries about entering. Young Selick has made several long runs in the last year or so, one of them

WEST VA. MATMEN FACE ILLINI TONIGHT

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 4.—The West Virginia University mat team will appear in its first home match tonight against the team from the University of Illinois, in the third meet of the season.

The strong University of Missouri team has already been defeated by the Illinois team, which finished the 1927 season as Big Ten Conference champions. The Mountaineers have already lost to Indiana and Michigan, this year, two other Big Ten Conference teams. On the face of the dope, it hardly looks like a Mountaineer victory against the veteran Illinois combination.

Since the close of the examinations for the first semester, Coach Harrick has supervised some intensive workouts for the Mountaineer matmen, who are handicapped by lack of competition of a large squad of candidates. There are no extra men for workouts in one or two of the classes, and compared to this, the University of Illinois squad has been cut down to 21 men.

LES PATRICK, MANAGER OF NEW YORK RANGERS

The Rangers meet the Pirates in a league game on the Duquesne Garden ice tonight and are expected to show some of the speed and grim fighting qualities which Patrick demands and which have carried them to the top in the American Section of the National Professional League. The Rangers defeated their New York rivals, the Americans, 7-0, in Madison Square Garden last Sunday night, after having beaten Detroit, leading contender for the lead, 3-0, just before that battle.

Lacoste Called Second Lindy In France

PARIS, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—France has discovered a counter-balance to Lindbergh. Modest and taciturn, Rene Lacoste stood behind rows of ambassadors, ministers, statesmen and politicians at the Elysee Palace yesterday while President Doumergue conducted the Davis Cup drawings.

"Where is this young man Lacoste?" M. Doumergue asked. "I hear he was the greatest artisan of the victory defeating Tilden and Johnston."

Pierre Gillou, captain of the French Davis Cup team, brought the blushing Lacoste forward.

"I am going to nominate you ambassador to Washington," Doumerge said jokingly. "You are the only man we have to counterbalance Lindbergh."

BASKETBALL referees as well as officials in other branches of sport have their "off" nights, but one arbiter who seems to improve with age is Leo Mackey, a member of the Tri-State Officials' Association.

A former professional star himself, having played with the famous South Side Lafayettes when that team ranked with the leading professional clubs in this section, Mackey's manner in handling contests of importance leaves no room for complaint.

Leo Mackey.

Mackey is of the fearless type of referees who calls plays as he sees them and as a result has earned for himself a reputation that stamps him as one of the best officials in this section of the country.

The success of any official depends on his ability to keep the contest under his control from the start to the finish. Mackey in this respect stands in a class by himself. He has taken the toughest assignments in local basketball circles and has handled them in a manner that has met with the hearty approval of both contestants.

Not too technical in his decisions on the floor, Mackey is the type of an official that adds considerable color to a basketball game. More officials along the lines of this veteran referee would have a tendency to increase interest in the sport hereabouts.

We have yet to find a team in local basketball circles that can say that Mackey is not fair in his decisions on the court. Losers as well as winners invariably congratulate him on his work. Mackey, provided he is in a receptive mood, is deserving of receiving a trial in the American Professional League.

DRIBBLES

Three good games are scheduled at the Young Men's Hebrew Association tonight. The varsity and reserve teams clash with Sewickley Y. M. C. A., while the Young Women's Hebrew Association girls meet Turtle Creek. Next Wednesday night the Y. W. H. A. girls meet the Goldenson Vanities in a return game.

Peter (Jersey) Siegle, former Buhl Club star, made a decided impression in his first game as a member of the Somermans, scoring the field goal that gave his team a one-point victory over the Sianos.

The C. M. C. Reserves of Mt. Washington have won 23 out of 24 games played so far this season and are eager to arrange games with junior clubs. Call Lafayette 9744 and ask for George Hurd.

PANTHER GRIDDERS FETED IN PHILLY

By JESS CARVER.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Philadelphia and West Point, N. Y., folks are hosts today to representatives from two of Pittsburgh's three collegiate institutions, Pitt and Tech. The Panthers' undefeated basketball team, nosing about in search of a national championship, will engage the West Point Cadets, rated among the strongest quintets in the East, this afternoon. Carnegie's varsity passers, whose record is as drab as Pitt's is brilliant, engages Penn State at State College tonight.

GRIDDERS IN PHILLY

While these two teams are in action, another Pitt party, including Chancellor John G. Bowman, Capt. Gibby Welch, Coach Sutherland, Student Manager McKee and Assistant Director of Athletics Frank (Pie) Williams and Captain-elect Alec Fox, is in Philadelphia as guests of honor at the annual banquet of the Veteran Athletes' Association, tonight, and will be presented with the Herbert H. Jolley trophy, emblematic of the eastern intercollegiate gridiron championship for 1927.

The Panthers will not be the only honor guests tonight. Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has been invited to attend and is expected to go to Philly today from New York, where he attended the National League meeting yesterday. Other guests include the Penn State's cross-country champions, Chamberlin and Schildhauer, trans-Atlantic fliers; Benny Bass, featherweight boxing champion; A. A. Zimmerman, world's bicycle champion; Bernard J. Wefers, sprint champion; Paul T. Scull, Penn grid star; John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants; Prof. Petuch; all-Catholic High School crew, national rowing champions; Mt. Carmel High School eleven, football champions of Pennsylvania; Dr. C. A. Herrick, president of Girard College; Dr. Charles E. Beury, president of Temple University; Dr. George W. Orton; J. Tripplett Hazall, world's placement kick record holder, and William Muldoon of the New York Boxing Board.

TARTANS FACE TEST

Of the two basketball teams, the Tartans are going to have the hardest task. At least their chances for success are vastly inferior to those of Pitt. Tough as the Army is, it has been defeated twice this season, and it is the belief of those who have seen both fives in action that the Panthers will simply outspeed the Cadets.

Tech, after a layoff extending over two weeks, will find the Lions to be powerful and formidable opponents. Tech will do well to hold the score down tonight.

PIRATE HOCKEY CLUB SALE UP AT MEET

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Conferences are opening here today between representatives of the Irvin Wener interests of Philadelphia, attorneys for Horace Townsend, owner of the Pittsburgh National Hockey League club, and President Frank Calder with a view to the purchase and transfer of the Pittsburgh team to Philadelphia.

Despite Townsend's denial of intention to sell, news of the impending transfer comes today from high hockey authorities, and the deal is regarded as being in the stage where only league sanction is required to complete arrangements unless a hitch should occur in the conferences here between the two clubs.

Princeton To Meet Navy

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Navy will meet Princeton on November 24 at Philadelphia, the Tiger replacing the Army on the Middies' football schedule, as a result of the breach between the two service institutions over the three-year eligibility rule enforced by the Naval Academy.

Meanwhile, indications are that West Point will fill the gap by playing Nebraska University. Although no definite announcement has been made, as in the case of Navy-Princeton, officials of Army and Nebraska are now negotiating for the contest.

In addition to the game down for November 24 between Navy and Princeton, contests for 1929 and 1930 have been decided upon by these institutions. But the games in the years succeeding the coming season call for October dates, thereby presenting an opening for a revival of the Army-Navy classic next year.

BOROTRA WINS TITLE

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—Jean Borotra, French Davis cup player, today won the singles championship of Australia. He defeated R. O. Cummings, of Sydney, 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 5-7 and 6-3.

WILLOWS IN MEET

The Pittsburgh Athletic Association will hold its second indoor meet of the season tonight. Among the large number of entries is a strong team from the Willows swimming pool.

YANKS RELEASE WERA

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—The New York Yankees today announced the release on option of Julian Wera, infielder, to Hollywood, in the Pacific Coast League.

LOENDI AT CLEVELAND

The Loendi basketball team will leave Monday morning for Cleveland, where it will face the Cleveland Elks quintet in a feature game on the Elks Temple floor.

ALLEGHENY ON TOP

Allegheny High School's basketball team easily defeated the Dormont High passers yesterday afternoon by a 49-13 score. The North Side quintet was never behind and jumped away to a comfortable lead at the start.

PIRATES TO OPEN SEASON WITH CARDS APRIL 11

A Suspender Salesman Is Not Necessarily a Holdup Man

★ SUN-TELEGRAPH ★ SPORTS ★

SOCCER NEWS by TOM BIRKS

THE leanest card of the local soccer season will face the followers of the sport today, only one game being scheduled, that being a benefit affair, featuring the Central A. C. and Swissvale at the Switch grounds.

Fans, however, will not flock out to see exhibition soccer and will probably wait until tomorrow when a good card of league games is offered for their entertainment.

Now that the District League has finished its schedule it is hardly possible that a large Saturday program will be presented to the fans with the exception of cup games. From now until the end of the season it will be up to the American League to make the big splash in local soccer. This loop again offers three games for the fans to follow tomorrow.

With Heidelberg at Cooley opposing the Corinthians a great game should be staged. The national amateur champions are in rare trim and the Green and Gold will be at top form on the Castle Shannon enclosure. Balsarini is keeping the boys in trim, seeing that the closing rounds of the amateur tourney are getting due.

The Corinthians have a real good club, far better than its showing in the tournaments would indicate. And a good day with a big crowd would be a Godsend to Peel's club with its depleted treasury.

Fandom locally will be more than interested in the draw for the national amateur cup, which will be made in Cleveland next week. While all of this ballyhoo for the Olympic games is being broadcast fandom is watching the amateur champions. Let us hope they are not drawn at Cleveland in this round.

False Advertising Charge Against Champ Stands

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—Judge Samuel R. Blake has refused to dismiss false advertising charges brought against Joe Dundee, welterweight champion, and his manager, Max Waxman. The charges were brought as a result of the fight which failed to come off between Dundee and Ace Hudkins on November 23, last.

The motion to dismiss was made by the city prosecutor's office, which indicated the intention of having Dundee and Waxman appear as witnesses against Dick Donald, fight promoter similarly charged.

Trial was set for March 16. Dundee and Waxman are said to be in New York.

No disposition has yet been made of the gate receipts, estimated at $80,000.

The musical part of the program was exceptionally good. P. A. Boyd, the Westinghouse go-getter, was on the job with a dozen different acts, each of which was a corker.

Samuel Watters, secretary of the Pirates, gave one of the principal talks of the evening. The Bucco official was warm in his tribute to McKechnie. Others answering the toastmaster were Burgess J. R. WHITE SOX SIGN TWO COLLEGE STARS

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Secretary Harry Grabiner of the White Sox has announced the signing of two promising young ball players and also made public the fact that Ed Walsh, the "Big Moose," had been signed to coach the young pitchers during the training grind which will get under way at Shreveport, La., March 1.

The youngsters signed are collegians. Henry Schrump is a first baseman and learned baseball, among other things, at the western State College at Kalamazoo, Mich. The other collegian first attended Texas University, which sent Bib Falk, Sox outfielder, to the major league and later attended the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. His name is Miller Beasley and he is a third baseman.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THE Pirates, as usual, are given all the big holiday dates, as well as many Saturdays, on their home card by the National League schedule released for publication today.

Forbes Field will feature the senior league champs on 16 Saturdays, Decoration Day, July 4 and Labor Day.

The Bushwhackers will stage their home opener on Thursday, April 19, the St. Louis Cardinals, under Skipper Bill McKechnie, to be the foemen.

All clubs will open on Wednesday, April 11, with the Pirates jumping off in St. Louis. The season closes on Sunday, September 30, but the Pirates will see the curtain fall on the previous afternoon at Ebbets Field, home of the Dodgers.

While the Bucs are opening the season with the Cards, the Cubs and Reds will pry off the lid in Cincinnati and in the East, the Giants will meet Boston at the Polo Grounds and the Dodgers and Phils will tangle in Brooklyn.

The Cardinals will be the added attraction on Decoration Day; the Reds will be here on Independence Day, while the Cubs, featuring Ki Cuyler, will cross bats with the Pirates on the holiday dedicated to labor. Morning and afternoon games will be played on all three dates.

The popular Giants will make their first appearance in Oakland on Tuesday, May 8 when they will arrive for four games.

The playing chart as a whole appears to be well arranged.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

to take a throw from the catcher and touch out the man coming down from first. That was the first play of Jennings' own invention that I learned by watching him.

"JENNINGS' success in getting runners at second base under such conditions was due largely to the great system he had of covering the bag.

"Running bases countless times against him, I learned that when he covered second to take a throw blocked off the base in such a manner that one little corner, inside or out, as he saw fit, was all that he left exposed for the runner to touch. It was a tough job getting in on him.

George Gibson.

"And he also found a way to stand near second base in such a position on long hits that the runner from first was forced to make a detour to get around him. That meant the loss of a couple of good steps by the runner and often the latter would be caught trying to reach third as a result. It was all legitimate, but it showed what an inventive and fast-thinking player Jennings was."

WAGNER was reminded that he had invented a few plays himself, in addition to learning and perfecting Jennings' best ones.

"I remember one that was a terrible bust the first time we tried it, but that turned out so well later that it was worked frequently.

"Catcher George Gibson, Third Baseman Tommy Leach and I conceived the idea of trapping a runner off third. The signal would be given for a pitch-out to the batter, and Leach would edge in toward home from third as if he anticipated a bunt. We figured that the runner on third would follow him. Then I was to run over to third from shortstop, and Gibson was to take the pitchout and peg the ball down to me in time to touch out the runner trying to get back to third.

"WE TRIED it first in an exhibition game on Sunday in Newark, N. J., and it worked well until it came to the throw that was intended to catch the man off third. Then Gibson fired the ball about 10 feet over my head and instead of catching the runner we enabled him to score.

TOMMY LEACH.

"Manager Fred Clarke razzed us at the time, but at that he saw merit in the play and when we worked it again in Brooklyn next day and got away with it he made it a regular part of our defense."

WAGNER also was an admirer of Col. Joe Thompson. "I played basketball against Joe when he and Edgar and others were playing on the Pitt team on the North Side," said Honus. "Thompson was one of the best players around here at that time and as a foul shooter he had few equals."

FRED CLARKE

Mention of basketball led Wagner to recall the days of nearly three decades ago when he played on the D. C. & A. C. team in the old Market house in Market square. Among other members of the team were Fitch, now at Carnegie Tech; Seible, Orr and Geisler, the latter at present a county detective.

"There were some remarkable scores in those days," said Wagner. "I remember one game at Steubenville in which we were defeated by a score of 7 to 6. I think that was a record low score for a full game. But there were some other low ones, particularly the score of 6 to 5 by which the Carnegie team on which I was playing defeated Johnny Freund's South Side team for the district championship."

escape the sting of Pittsburgh defeat. The Bucs made their best showing against Patrick's Gothamites here a few weeks ago when they held them to a 2-2 deadlock. In that battle the locals fought the Big Towners to a standstill and moved the fans to a standup. Tonight is another night, but there is no reason to believe that the milling will be any different.

Hockey enthusiasts who have a liking for figures can delve into the records of Cleghorn's defense trio and come up with a juicy morsel almost any time. In the last three settos the Burke-McCaffrey-Worters combine has allowed exactly one goal. That lone tally was recorded by the Canadiens, and it is a matter of record that holding the Flying Frenchmen to one goal is just the same as holding any other club to zero minus. Frank Boucher, the Cook brothers and Ching Johnson are the Rangers' Big Berthas on the attack.

Since Taffy Abel returned to the lineup to pair with Johnson at the defense posts, the Ranger citadel, too, has been no cheesebox. Taffy is a big boy and Ching is overgrown, and both are experts in the matter of ruining a foe's ambition. They make a practice of treating everybody alike in that they treat 'em rough, and if they are up to form there soon will be many bruises where only fair skin was before. Formidable as these Gotham guardians are, however, the Buc cause is not hopeless, for every man except Worters has been inoculated with the scoring germ. In early-season games Milks, Darragh, McCurry and Drury bore the brunt of the attack, and more recently Cotton, McCaffrey and White were the boys who tallied when tallies were much in demand.

The probable lineup:

Pirates.		Rangers.
Worters	G.	Chabot
Burke	R. D.	Abel
McCaffrey	L. D.	Johnson
Milks	C.	Boucher
Darragh	R. W.	Bill Cook
Cotton	L. W.	Bun Cook

Pirate spares—Drury, White, McCurry, O. Cleghorn, Smith and McKinnon.

Ranger spares—Bourgeault, Gray, Murdock, Boyd, Scott.

NOTRE DAME CAPTAIN WORTH FIVE MILLION

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 4—(AP.)—To be captain of Notre Dame's football team is glory enough, so Fred Miller, just chosen to lead the 1928 eleven, would not talk today of his wealth although he is the possessor of five million dollars.

Coach Knute Rockne let the secret out late last fall, but Miller quickly let it be known that the subject was distasteful to him and he became again just one of the varsity.

PALMER ADDS ANOTHER GOLF WIN TO LIST

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 4—T. W. Palmer, of Miami, who has used a mashie to be present at the top of almost every amateur event that has been held in this section for the last 10 years, again won the Miami Beach men's amateur championship title yesterday with a decisive defeat over H. M. Brice, 8 and 7.

Morrison Orr, of New York, defeated E. A. Inglehart, of Chicago, 5 and 4, to win the second flight.

WHITE SOX SIGN TWO

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—(AP.)—The White Sox have added two college baseball players to the roster. Henry Schrump, a right-handed first baseman, was signed from the Western State Normal College at Kalamazoo, Mich. Miller Beasley, a third baseman, was signed from Bonham, Texas, the home of Ted [illegible] and [illegible].

Soccer Heads Must Answer Charges

By TOM BIRKS.

ORGANIZED league soccer in Western Pennsylvania won a moral victory last evening when it forced through a motion calling for two members of the West Penn Football Council to answer charges at a special meeting of the association next Saturday evening. But it was only after a bitter fight where every little technicality was used by members of council in an attempt to prevent the much discussed motion going through.

There is still a chance that people will say that the meeting was illegal since the chairman pro tem. called the meeting closed before the delegates had swung into action. It was thought that harmony would dominate the session, but this was soon dispelled. Secretary Parks called the meeting to order in the Hotel Henry. Neither the president or vice president put in an appearance, and Iver Hopkins was elected chairman.

Before the delegates knew what was happening, Representative Mincher of the International League had placed before the chairman a motion that a special meeting be held within 10 days so that the preferred charges could be given to the members involved and a chance given them to fight them. This went through, and then Representative Clark made a motion that the meeting adjourn, which Chairman Hopkins acted upon, and then left the meeting.

Things happened fast. The delegates were not going to let anything like that happen. The representatives of the Monongahela district, Chartiers Valley, Scottish Clan and International leagues as a quorum then voted that the business for which the meeting was called be transacted and this was carried. Secretary Parks came back to the meeting and acted as secretary, reading the list of seven pages of charges against the officers named.

When the second meeting started after ex-President Hopkins had vacated the chair, Mike Quinn from the Chartiers Valley was elected chairman. Quinn had a tough battle handling that session, but the Chartiers Valley man evidently got the matter settled, for the vote went through.

Secretary Parks intimated that both President Carson and Vice President Phillip Hillen would be back in harness, since the council had refused to accept their resignations. But Vice President Hillen assured the writer last evening that he was through for the season.

BUSCH

from Pittsburgh to Ambridge and another from East Liverpool, O., to Pittsburgh.

Busch is confident he will win one of the major prizes. First prize is $25,000, second $10,000, third $5,000, and there are some others ranging down to $1,000. He believes the experience he gained in making the trip last year will give him a decided edge over the remainder of the field.

"I believe I have only two real competitors in the race," Busch said. "They are Mad Bull, the Indian, who won the big highway race in the West last year, and Naughton of South Africa, who holds all world distance records up to 100 miles. He won his laurels in London last year, running 100 miles in 14 hours and 20 minutes."

PLANS FOR RACE

Considering the hardships he had to endure going it alone on his solo effort, Busch thinks the coming jaunt will be a cakewalk. The plans for the race call for the field to start out in a bunch each day, so that he will not suffer from loneliness. Each day will see a race. The field will start out from Los Angeles with the first objective 65 miles away. The runners will rest there over night and start out fresh the next morning. Checkers will keep tab on their times, and the race will be decided entirely on elapsed time.

A commissary and hospital tents will be set up at the control points and the runners will be fed and treated as their individual needs demand. Unmarked cars will patrol the route and any runners caught cheating by asking or accepting rides will be immediately disqualified. When a runner drops out of the race he will be refunded $100, which he must place on deposit before starting, and this will provide him transportation back home, so that there will be no chance of any of the runners becoming stranded.

After the race, Pyle plans to put on six-day races in various cities featuring the leaders and has in mind other ways and means of enriching the athletes, and, incidentally, himself.

NORTHWESTERN LOSES ANOTHER TRACK STAR

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—Northwestern University's 1928 track team received its second reverse in as many days yesterday when Arnold (Kit) Karsten was declared ineligible for spring athletics, having flunked a mid-year examination.

Karsten starred in the weight events, being a member of the quartet of shot putters that placed Northwestern high in track meets last year. He was also a member of the football team.

Capt. Leland (Tiny) Lewis, winner of the Western Conference shot-put last spring, and all-round athlete, was declared ineligible Thursday. Karsten is a junior, while Lewis is a senior.

Tex Orders Heavies To Cancel Bouts

By MURRAY LEWIN.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Tex Rickard has issued an ultimatum to the four heavyweights who are to take part in the elimination series, Jack Delaney, Tom Heeney, Jack Sharkey and Johnny Risko, that they must not compete in any bouts prior to their battles in the Garden next month.

The promoter in a long talk with Joe Jacobs, manager of Delaney, on the long distance phone, told Joe that Delaney must call all the matches off that he had signed for with various Palukas around the country and not appear in the ring again until he tackles Heeney on March 1. Tex notified Jacobs that unless he complied with this demand, the promoter would consider Delaney out of the tournament.

Rickard gave as the reason that he could not afford to take chances of an injury now that he has signed Tunney to an expensive contract to defend his title against the winner of the tournament in June. Tex made it apparent that he thinks highly of Delaney, which was the reason he is more worried about Jack than any of the other three men.

Jacobs consented to call off the match with Larry Gaines in Toronto that was scheduled for February 20, but he explained to Rickard that he could not get out of the jam with Leo Gates at Rochester February 12. Joe pointed out that having signed the contracts in this state, the Boxing Commission would suspend him if Delaney did not go through.

MAX CAREY SIGNS BROOKLYN CONTRACT

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(INS.)—Max Carey, former star outfielder and captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates; Hank Deberry, catcher, and two recruits, Catcher Alonso Lopez and Outfielder Dan Taylor, have signed contracts with the Brooklyn Dodgers, it was announced today. Lopez was purchased from Jacksonville last fall and Taylor came up from Memphis, of the Southern Association, where he stole 37 bases last season.

FRANKLIN WINS

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 4.—Franklin further demonstrated its right to lead the section three division by trouncing Titusville Friday night 41 to 17, making a clean sweep of all league contenders thus far. At the same time Rocky Grove lost to Meadville, 46 to 25. Buffalo Lincolns triumphed over Franklin Y. M. C. A., 36 to 32.

Our Country's Vastness Has Its Drawbacks.

By B. C. FORBES

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4.—The vastness of our country has its drawbacks.

We have just had one illustration in Congress.

NATIONAL greatness and maritime strength go hand-in-hand. The dominating powers for centuries have been mighty on the ocean. In later times "Britannia Rules the Waves" has been the proud boast of Great Britain. And you will recall that the Kaiser left nothing undone to create a vast, efficient merchant marine as well as navy.

America admittedly has become the strongest, richest, foremost nation in the world.

But how about our place on the seas?

UNLESS we can develop a leading place on the seas, our place in the world will not be properly fortified.

BUT many of those who live inland haven't the slightest conception of what's maritime-wise. Seldom seeing the ocean, it naturally enters but little into their life or thought.

When a man doesn't know a thing and knows that he doesn't know, his ignorance isn't dangerous. But when he doesn't know, yet is sure that he does know, then the consequences are likely to be unfortunate.

Senator Oddie of Nevada has been making an exhibition of himself as a shining example of this truth.

THIS inlander has aroused the Pacific coast by his wild allegations against the one American shipping company that has proved its ability to hold its own against foreign competition and to achieve what no other company, either American or foreign, has been able to achieve, namely, the maintaining of a round-the-world passenger and freight line that runs on schedule with a punctuality not matched by any railroad or bus line. Each ship leaves each port on the minute week after week and year after year. The service is fully four years old.

Not only so, but this Pacific coast company has sent its own representatives, from its veteran president down, to drum up markets for many, many million dollars' worth of American products, agricultural as well as manufactured. It gives employment to more than 10,000 workers.

Senator Oddie alleges that this concern, the Dollar Line, is under the domination of foreign interests, that it is the catspaw of wicked schemers, that it is un-American, that it employs only foreign hands, and that Herbert Fleishhacker, leading San Francisco banker, is the arch-plotter against America's maritime upbuilding.

THESE accusations are bosh—utter bosh.

Here are the facts:

Not one share of Dollar Line stock is owned by any foreigner. The company is controlled, lock, stock and barrel, by the Dollar family. Mr. Fleishhacker is a stockholder in this as in a great many other Pacific enterprises—the bewildering variety and scope of Herbert Fleishhacker's activities are so extensive that a common saying here is, "Herbert Fleishhacker is in everything."

Ten Dollar ships employ Chinese stewards—if you have ever traveled on ships employing Americans as waiters you will understand why.

All officers and seamen on the Pacific Ocean Dollar steamers are Americans, but the 'round the world Dollar steamers, because of the great heat in the tropics, have Chinese sailors.

Robert Dollar admittedly is a past-master of shipping and ship ownership, but to picture him as monopolizing all the shipping on the largest ocean on the face of the earth is to flatter him beyond warrant of the facts. In plainer language, Senator Oddie's charges are undiluted bunk.

THE Pacific coast people know something of what the 84-year-old Robert Dollar and his son, Stanley, have done to develop business for Pacific ports. They know something of the new overseas channels they have opened up for the products of American farmers and wage earners. They know something of what Robert Dollar has done to cement international friendship, especially between this country and China. They know, too, something of what the Dollars are doing to recruit and train the youth of America to man and command American ships, a service which, though doubtless inspired by motives of profit, has a patriotic value not easily exaggerated.

As it is the man who has done and is doing this, the one American shipowner who has proved more than a match for foreign competitors, the man who is keeping the American flag flying at mastheads when others are disposed to sell out, the man who is doing more perhaps than any other citizen to make American youths sea-minded—it is this man than an inland senator, palpably ignorant of the facts, grossly maligns; and then, when called a debaucher of the truth and challenged to submit the slightest iota of proof, this same senator ducks by declaiming, under senatorial privilege, that he retracts nothing!

LITTLE wonder the people here are disgusted.

MARKET MIXED THEN TURNS DOWN

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—(AP.)—An early period of uncertainty in today's stock market was succeeded by a general down-turn of values. Raising of the San Francisco rediscount rate apparently convinced many traders that a curtailment of speculative resources was being resorted to by a gradual lifting of these rates in interior federal reserve districts.

A decrease of $12,000,000 in stock exchange member loans seemed to have no more than temporary effect on sentiment, and efforts to combat the wave of selling for both accounts were futile except in a few issues which had powerful pool support. Offerings of standard railway stocks were more abundant, seeming to point to liquidation, but conservative interests not in sympathy with efforts to bid up the volatile issues.

Short covering caused recoveries in spots in the final hour and some of the early losses were turned into gains before the session ended. Vanadium Steel continued to show strength, getting up around the 85 level, and Nevada Copper sold above 21, the highest for an extended period.

Earlier the sensitiveness of Radio to pressure despite willingness of pools yesterday to take large blocks, had encouraged speculative drives against other popular shares. Erie had dropped about 3 points on sharp criticism by the Kemp committee of Chesapeake and Ohio purchases of Erie shares. Delaware and Hudson also was down about 2 points before the list showed signs of rallying, and losses of 2 points or more had been recorded by Dupont, General Asphalt, International Harvester, United Drug, Peoples Gas, Greene Cananea Copper, American Radiator and Calumet and Arizona.

The closing was irregular. Total sales approximated 1,200,000 shares.

STANDARD SANITARY, LONE STAR ARE FIRM

GENERAL LIST NARROW

Prices were narrow on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short week-end session today, but the tone of the market was steady and demand for some of the better grade industrials was sufficient to hold quotations at or slightly above the previous closings levels.

Standard Sanitary Manufacturing was in good demand at 110, the best price on the current movement, with a good volume of stock wanted at that figure. The company recently declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on the stock, but there has been no information as to dividend rates on the new shares into which the present stock will be exchanged on a three-for-one basis.

Lone Star Gas displayed continued firmness and sold again at 55, the top price so far this year. Quickening of demand for Lone Star has revived discussion of a probable stock dividend to be declared out of the enlarged capital approved by the stockholders a few weeks ago.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 4 to 8 points under overnight selling orders, but offerings were comparatively light and prices steadied up after the call on covering and a little trade buying.

Demand evidently was promoted by steadier Liverpool cables than expected, but reports of showers or prospects for rains in some sections of the Southwest brought in selling and after working up from 17.24c to 17.33c for May the market eased back to about the opening quotations.

Private cables said there had been covering and trade calling with continental buying in Liverpool, but that business in cotton cloths in Manchester had been checked by political disturbances in India and cotton yarn sales were below production.

Futures closed steady, 16@21 points lower. March, 16.97@17.00c; May, 17.14@17.16c; July, 17.22@17.23c; October, 17.01@17.02; December, 16.99@17.01c. Spot quiet; middling, 17.50c.

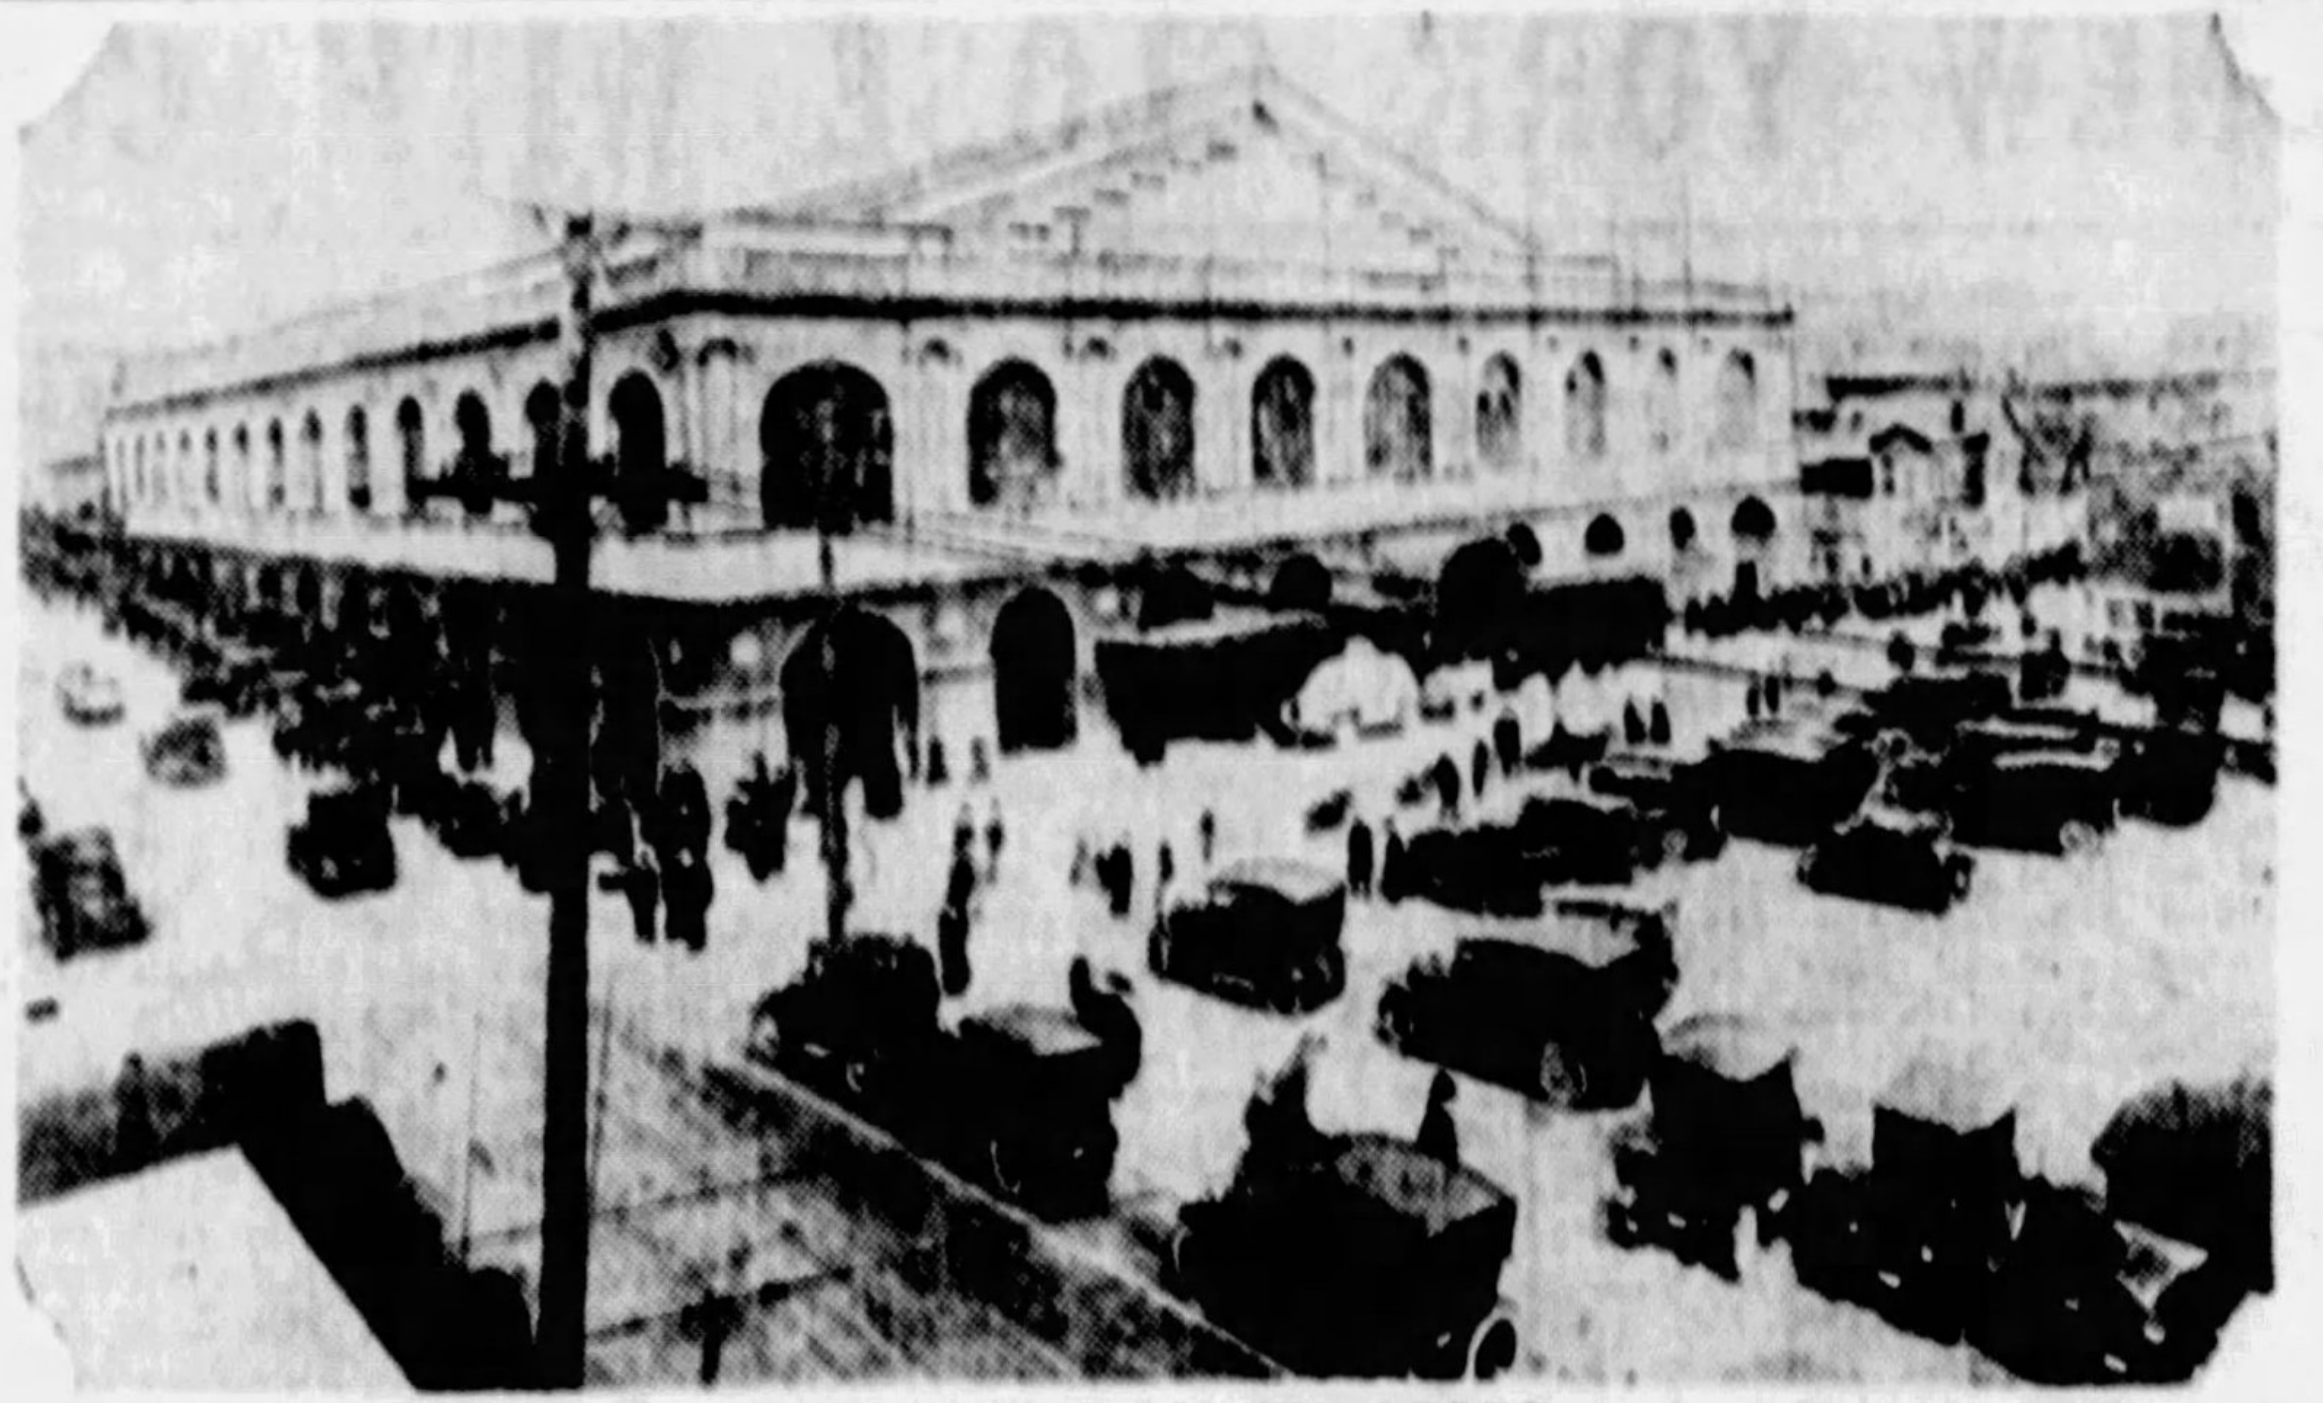
REPUBLICAN CONVENTION HALL



PITTSBURGH IN 1932?

In this hall at Kansas City, Mo., the Republican National Convention will be held next June. In 1900 the Democratic party held its national convention in the same building. Pittsburghers who are supporting a movement for a town hall here are looking ahead to 1932, and if an auditorium large enough is built they intend to push Pittsburgh as a convention city. Next Monday night at a dinner in the William Penn Hotel, county commissioners will be asked to foster a bond issue to obtain funds for a hall here.

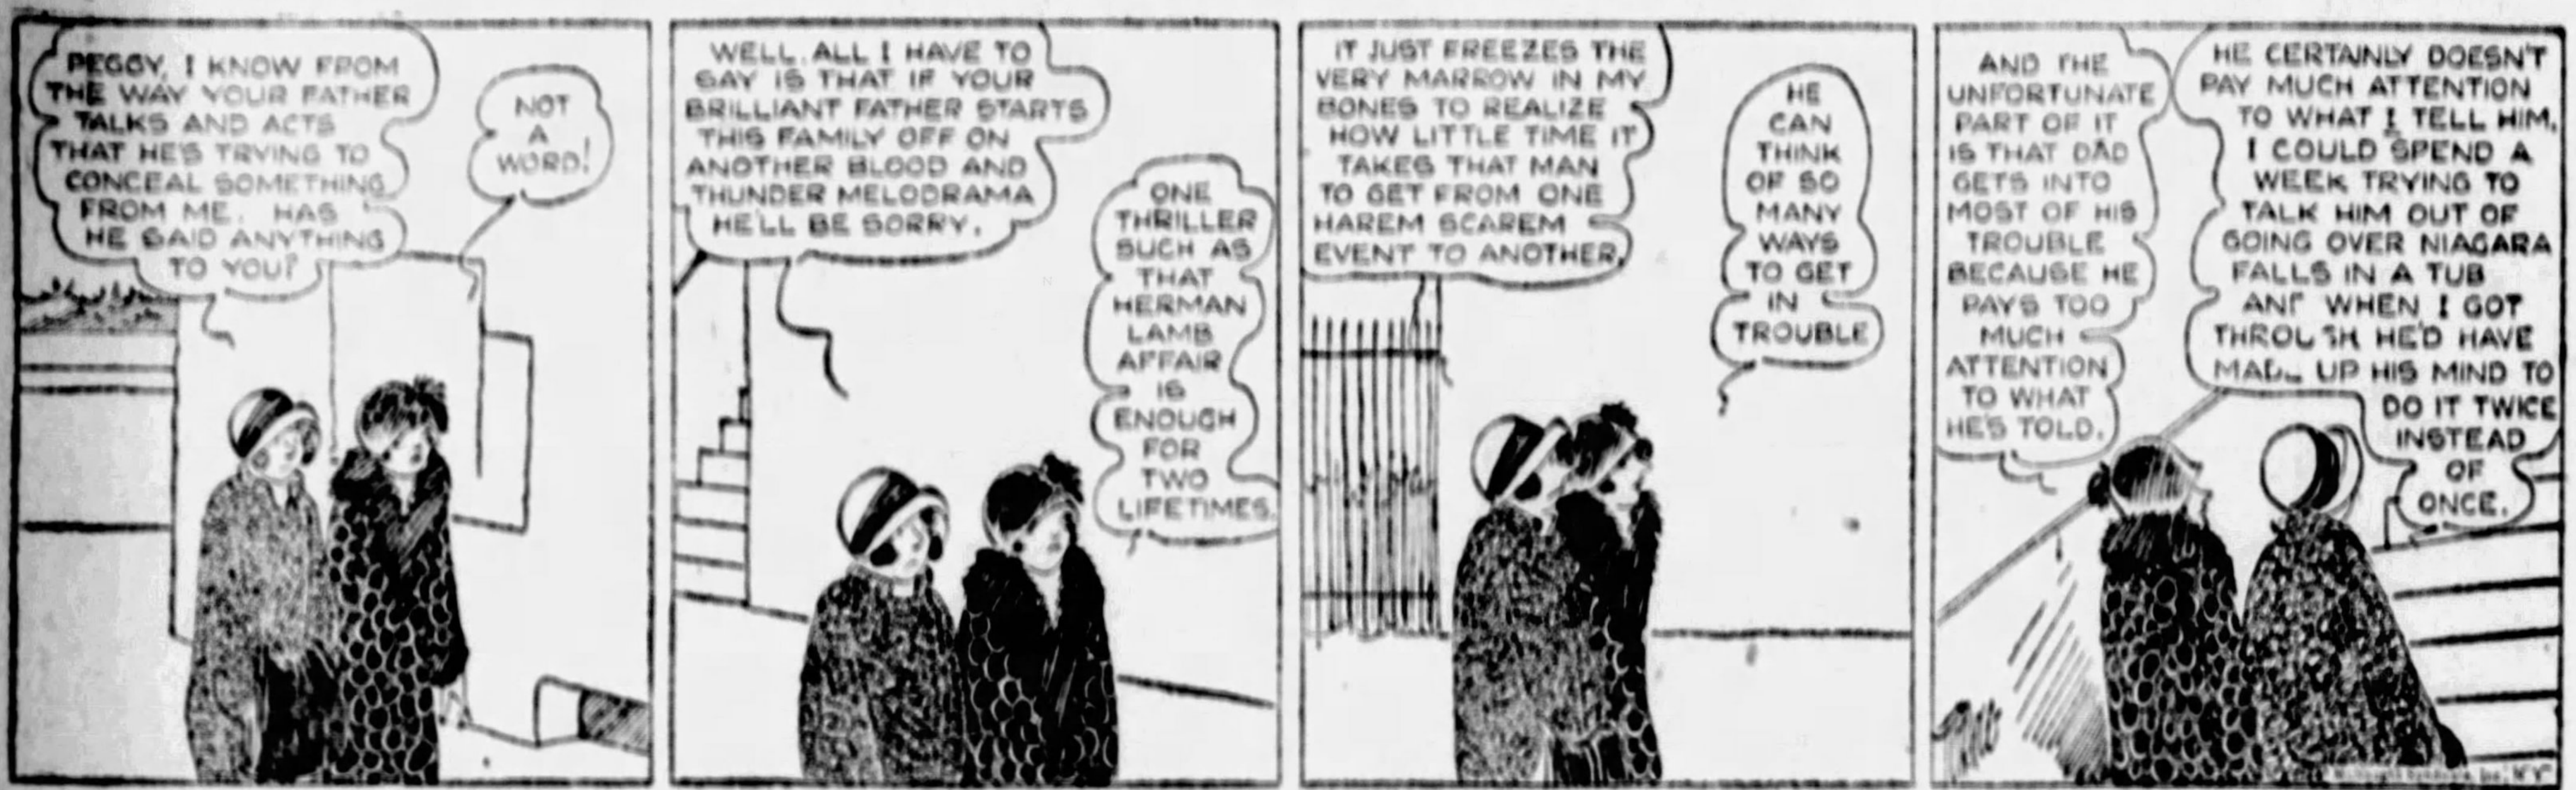
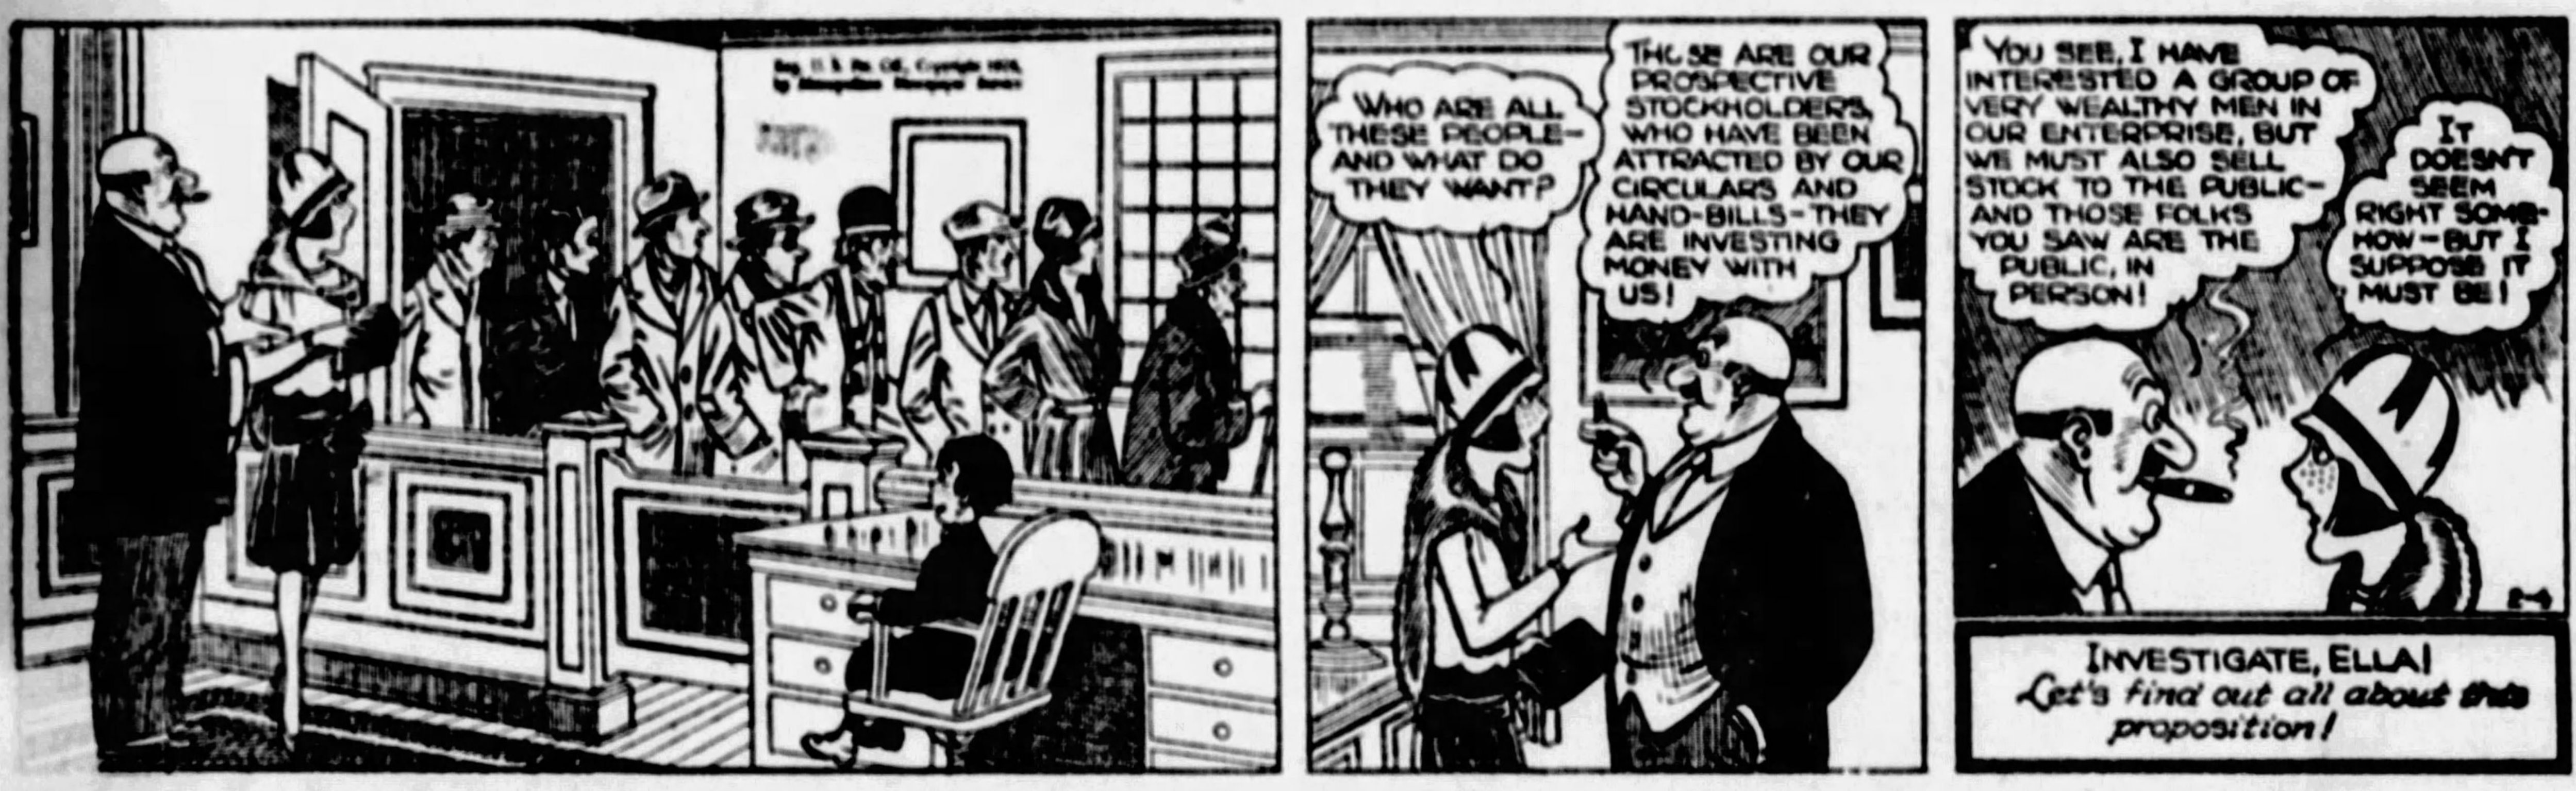
THE BUNGLE FAMILY . . . . Bees In the Colonel's Belfry Again



PEGGY, I KNOW FROM THE WAY YOUR FATHER TALKS AND ACTS THAT HE'S TRYING TO CONCEAL SOMETHING FROM ME. HAS HE SAID ANYTHING TO YOU?
NOT A WORD!
WELL, ALL I HAVE TO SAY IS THAT IF YOUR BRILLIANT FATHER STARTS THIS FAMILY OFF ON ANOTHER BLOOD AND THUNDER MELODRAMA HE'LL BE SORRY.
ONE THRILLER SUCH AS THAT HERMAN LAMB AFFAIR IS ENOUGH FOR TWO LIFETIMES.
IT JUST FREEZES THE VERY MARROW IN MY BONES TO REALIZE HOW LITTLE TIME IT TAKES THAT MAN TO GET FROM ONE HAREM SCAREM EVENT TO ANOTHER.
HE CAN THINK OF SO MANY WAYS TO GET IN TROUBLE
AND THE UNFORTUNATE PART OF IT IS THAT DAD GETS INTO MOST OF HIS TROUBLE BECAUSE HE PAYS TOO MUCH ATTENTION TO WHAT HE'S TOLD.
HE CERTAINLY DOESN'T PAY MUCH ATTENTION TO WHAT I TELL HIM. I COULD SPEND A WEEK TRYING TO TALK HIM OUT OF GOING OVER NIAGARA FALLS IN A TUB AND WHEN I GOT THROUGH HE'D HAVE MADE UP HIS MIND TO DO IT TWICE INSTEAD OF ONCE.

ELLA CINDERS . . . . The Dear Public



WHO ARE ALL THESE PEOPLE— AND WHAT DO THEY WANT?
THOSE ARE OUR PROSPECTIVE STOCKHOLDERS, WHO HAVE BEEN ATTRACTED BY OUR CIRCULARS AND HAND-BILLS— THEY ARE INVESTING MONEY WITH US!
YOU SEE, I HAVE INTERESTED A GROUP OF VERY WEALTHY MEN IN OUR ENTERPRISE, BUT WE MUST ALSO SELL STOCK TO THE PUBLIC— AND THOSE FOLKS YOU SAW ARE THE PUBLIC, IN PERSON!
IT DOESN'T SEEM RIGHT SOMEHOW— BUT I SUPPOSE IT MUST BE!
INVESTIGATE, ELLA! Let's find out all about this proposition!

LISTEN IF YOU'D LET ME ROB A FEW BANKS I'D GET YOU ENOUGH MONEY TO CLEAN UP ALL THE CROOKS IN TOWN— YOU'D GET NEWS TOO. I'D WRITE UP THE ROBBERIES MYSELF
SWIFTY, I DON'T KNOW WHAT YOUR PAST LIFE HAS BEEN— BUT WHILE YOU'RE WITH ME YOU'RE GOING STRAIGHT— BESIDES YOU'D BETTER LOOK OUT— YOU KNOW WHERE BANK ROBBERS GO WHEN THEY DIE YOU KNOW

HOW TO MAKE YOUR HORSE SIT UP, CHASE BALL, AND CARRY PACKAGES TO AND FROM POST OFFICE

Mr. Frisby's daily lectures on "The Health of Your Horse" are attracting thousands. You owe it to your horse not to miss a single one of Yogi Frisby's messages.

By Mister Frisby,
Congressman-at-Large.

WASHINGTON—Today I opened my Question Box in the depot and found it contained no questions from the public.

This delighted me, for it proves that there is no question in the public mind as to the practicability of my plan to help the farmer.

All I ask now is that everybody buy a horse without delay and turn his auto back to the finance company.

I will repeat my fundamental contentions, more horses will eat more hay and grain, thus creating a stable market for farm crops.

Now, as to the care and feeding of your horse—

First, determine is your horse broke?

If so, walk, don't run, to the nearest Farm Loan Bank, ask politely, but firmly, for a loan.

Then see whether there are any flies on your horse.

If so, swat the fly. If the horse appears annoyed when you swat the fly, explain to the horse what you are trying to do. Convince him that you are swatting him for his own good.

Of course, personally, I think a vacuum cleaner is the thing to use for removing flies from horses—but that is another story.

Tomorrow—How to determine the color of your horse's eyes.

It might be well to issue orders for police to take no chances when they get a whiff of Black Narcissus.

ON "TRUE CONSTANCY"

In LOVE there are TWO tragedies:
One, that a LOVER stops loving.
The other—that he DOESN'T!
CONSTANCY is the most wonderful
Thing in the WORLD, When one
WANTS it, it is like a
Precious JEWEL sparkling
On the links of life,
But when one wants to be
FREE, then it seems like a
CHAIN itself,
For people who are FAITHFUL
Invariably EXPECT faithfulness
In return. Little girls are Often more CONSTANT than men
In their small LOVE affairs,
But BIG MEN are often more
FAITHFUL than women in
The ONE IMPORTANT affair of
Their life. For the Man who has GIVEN much is Always OBSTINATE and just
Cannot believe that such
DEVOTION does not REGISTER.
After a sufficient number of
DISILLUSIONS most people learn
Where to RING off on this Question of CONSTANCY.
He who is TRUE to himself
Registers with the WORLD.
Till this is LEARNED, little is Learned. And those who can ACCOMPLISH this, ring up
Peace as well as PROFIT.

BUGS BAER Says

GOVERNMENT has just discovered that rum runners have their own private radio station.

It's located on Cape Cod, which is the farthest east an American can vote.

The new type of Pilgrims who are doing their landing on this historic spot have keener competition than the earlier settlers, who had no revenue agents with which to contend.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

And the new Pilgrims are landing heavy. One hundred cases of Plymouth rock and rye at a whack.

We realized that the stuff they're selling now had tremendous power and super-electrical fermentation.

But we never knew that you could broadcast it.

The United States District Attorney discovered the radio plant quite accidentally. He was seated one night at the radio while his fingers wandered idly over the knobs.

He struck one chord of static like the sound of a grand, "Oh, boy."

Give a wolf one feather and he will locate the henhouse. The D. A. took chemical analysis of the air and discovered it to be one part oxygen to three parts bran mash.

The scent led to a marine distillery outside the reform zone. The boys off the fishing banks were using corkscrews for tackle and swinging doors for sails.

The private radio was to keep 'em wised up to the location of the coast guard navy. It would surprise Tommy Lipton to learn that there is good racing all the year round off the cape.

This broadcasting steeple was for business and not entertainment. The entertainment came after the stuff was landed.

When the radio works were raided every member of the orchestra dropped his bottle and picked up a trombone. But the drummer couldn't explain why he was tapping with a bungstarter on a beer keg.

Therefore, the boys were declared contraband of quite a few amendments, subject to exile and confiscation of labels.

The D. A. hounds never got a chance to tune in on the three-star radio plant. This was due to the nature of the stuff being spiraled through the air. Anybody who has inhaled Cape Cod emulsion knows that you can get power out of it. But no distance.

Bullets Fly in Mine War

Strike Situation Grows More Serious

The shooting affray in the Curry strike zone, that shocked the country yesterday, is the natural consequence of official incompetency that permits the ruthless rule of coal and iron police in Western Pennsylvania.

Sheriff Braun very properly took charge of the riot district yesterday, after a rain of bullets had been pumped into strikers' barracks and a public school closed to save children from being shot by snipers.

Maybe Gov. Fisher will be spurred to take some decisive action now.

To preserve order and protect the public safety is the fundamental function of government.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, here on matters relating to the soft coal strike, expressed himself as being highly gratified at the "crystallization of public sentiment in favor of the striking mine workers."

Mr. Lewis should be careful not to misinterpret public feeling. While its sympathies have been strongly aroused by the unfortunate condition of women and children, the public, as usual, likely remains neutral as far as the basic differences which divide the miners and operators are concerned.

Humane hearts have been deeply touched by the sufferings of the miners' families disclosed completely only when Fannie Hurst began her series of articles in The Sun-Telegraph. That sentiment has crystallized into a feeling that the strike has already gone too far and should be ended.

It is felt that there have been grave mistakes on each side, but that they should be permitted to be remembered only as a record of blunders while the disputing sides renew attempts to bring about some kind of a settlement, or an "armistice," pending a government investigation.

Congressman La Guardia, of New York, said in Pittsburgh yesterday, "Asbestos will not hold the statements I shall make on the floor of the House."

He had just finished a tour of the strike district, and had talked to strikers' families that had been busy dodging bullets.

While Congressmen from New York and Senators from the Pacific coast show an intense interest in Western Pennsylvania's plight, what of the representatives of this district at Washington?

Senator Reed recently has expressed himself as being in sympathy with the investigation resolution, but who ever heard of a Pennsylvania Congressman sufficiently interested in this mine strike tragedy to take a good look at it?

'Justice Shops' a Disgrace; 'Jail Delivery' Proves It

Something new—and very good—in the administration of justice is the release from workhouse and jail of some half a hundred prisoners by orders of Judge James B. Drew.

These prisoners had been committed by magistrates to terms of imprisonment not warranted by law. They were victims of outrageous injustice perpetrated under forms of law.

The movement for this astonishing "jail delivery" was initiated by the County Solicitor and supported by the City Solicitor. It never should have been necessary. It would not have been necessary were there any proper supervision over the petty judiciary.

Police magistrates are appointed and justices of the peace and aldermen elected with slight consideration of their fitness or qualifications. So far as ever has appeared these men receive no instructions. Give them the benefit of the doubt and concede that they "do the best they can." Their best too often is the dispensing of injustice that amounts to monstrous tyranny.

But the poor devils illegally sentenced are not the only sufferers from the injustice. Society also is a victim—the chief victim. It is as common for the petty jurists to extend "mercy" viciously or ignorantly as for them to be despotically severe.

Mayor Kline could put the needed check on the police magistrates. He should do so. Is there no power to perform similarly with respect to justices of the peace and aldermen? If not, the sooner it is created the better.

Our "justice shops" as conducted are a disgrace.

He Dug 2,000 Graves

But Teeth Are the Champion Grave Diggers

A Western newspaper prints a picture of an old man who, in his lifetime, had dug 2,000 graves with his own hands.

He was called "The Champion Grave Digger," but was far from being champion.

Champion grave diggers are numerous, and they are HUMAN TEETH.

Nothing truer was ever said than this: "Men dig their graves with their teeth."

One-half of what we eat keeps us alive; the other half kills us. Eating to excess, we dig with our teeth premature graves by the millions.

A hungry man is hungry, not in one place, but in hundreds of millions of places at once.

A man's body is made up of billions of cells, each of which eats, drinks, breathes, requires nourishment, and EVERY ONE OF THEM GETS HUNGRY.

When we eat we put food in the stomach. That food does no good until it is taken up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, where it feeds the cells clamoring for food.

This process does not happen in a minute. It takes time for digestion to begin and let the blood carry through the body the new supply of nourishment.

While that digestive process is going on HUNGER CONTINUES. And we continue eating.

Long after we have eaten all that we need, we continue to eat, sincerely believing that we are still hungry.

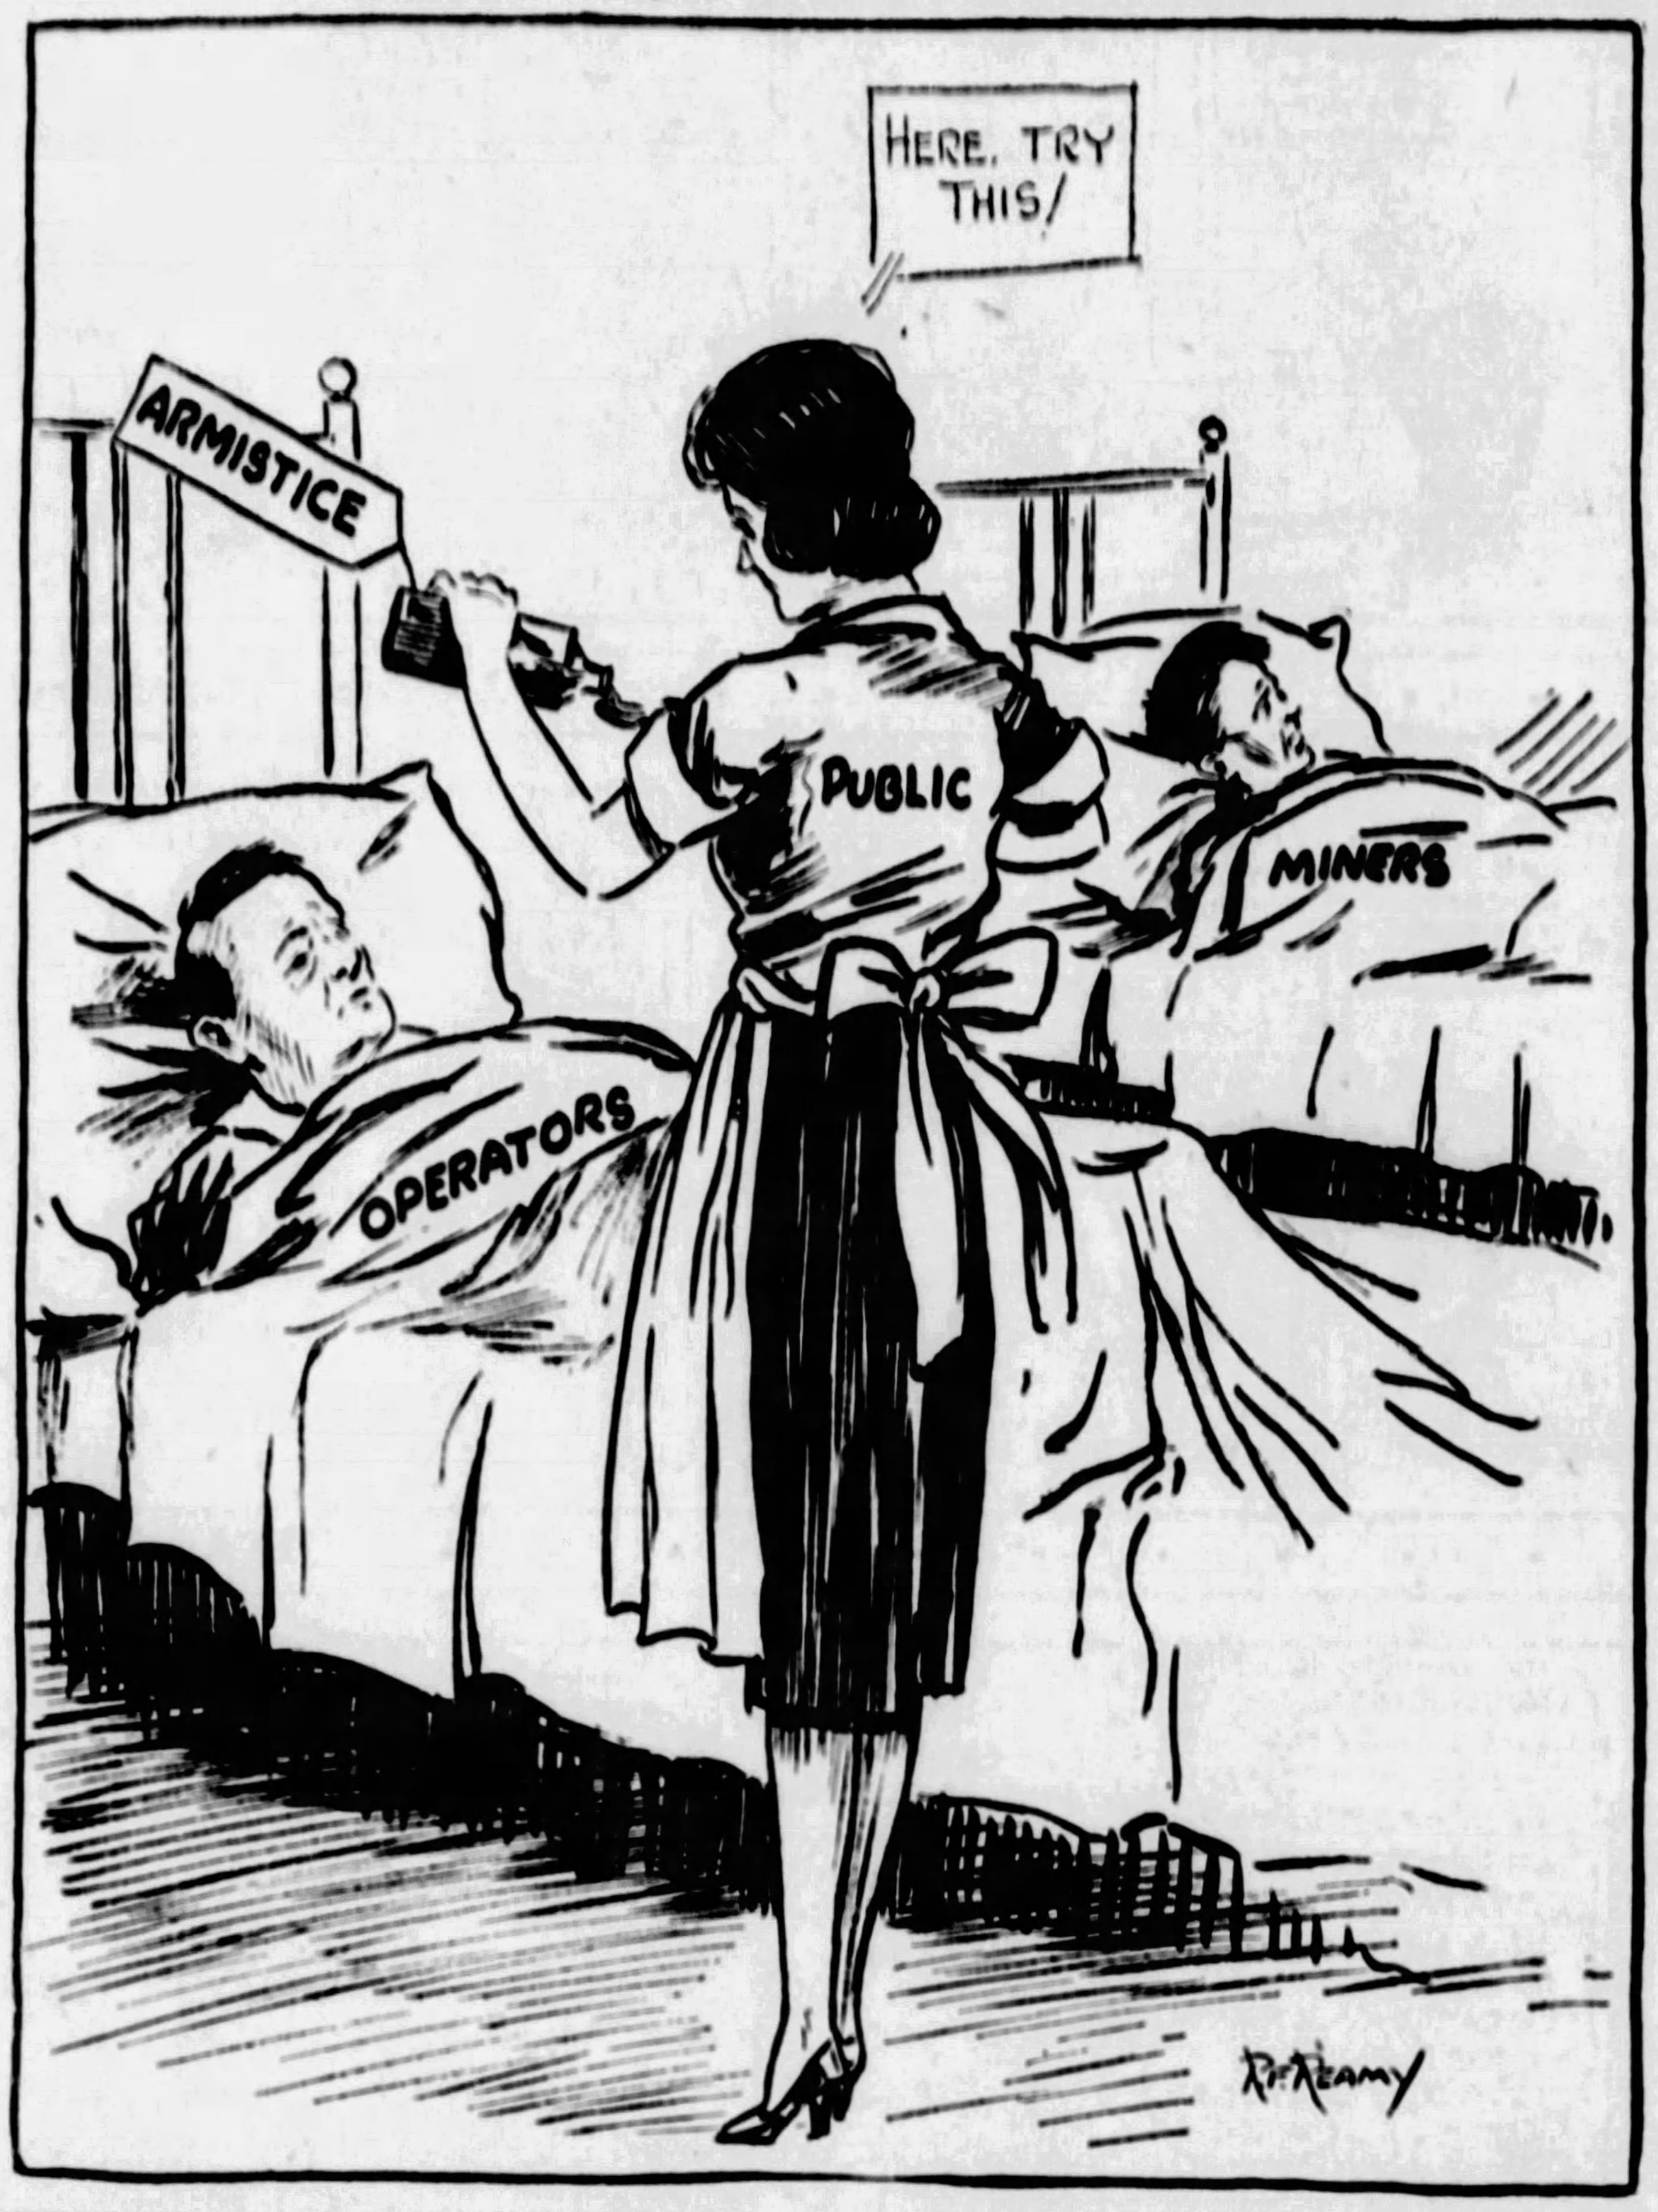
We think we are hungry because the food has not yet been taken by the blood to the cells that send the call for nourishment to the brain.

By the time they are satisfied and stop telling the brain they're hungry, the teeth have chewed up and the throat has swallowed twice, three times, or four times what the body really needs.

If you doubt it, make this experiment. Eat half way through your breakfast, or lunch, or dinner. Then stop eating, leave the table, stop eating for fifteen or twenty minutes. Come back and you will find that your hunger is GONE; you will not want to eat any more, unless you are a HOPELESS eater.

All of us, excepting the unfortunate poor, eat at least twice as much as we should eat. For many of us, especially those past 50, that lead sedentary lives, it would be a good thing to cut the average meal in two, and then eat ONE-HALF of the remainder.

FOR QUICK RELIEF

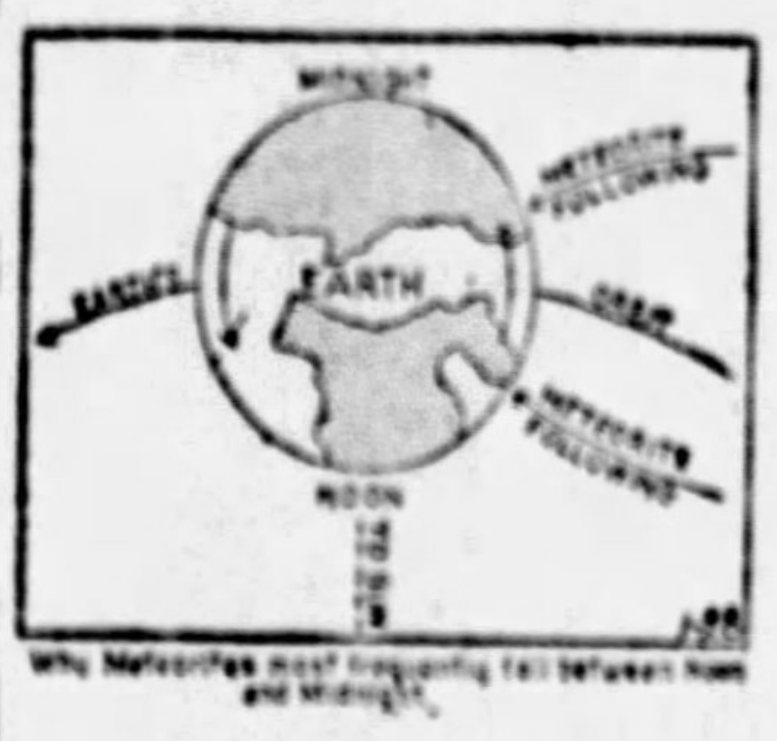


Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Mighty Siberian Meteorite

A WONDERFUL story is told of the fall in the province of Yenisei, Siberia, of a great meteorite whose shock produced tremblings of the earth that were registered by the seismographs as far away as Irkutsk, a distance of 800 miles. At another station, Kirensk, 300 miles from the place where the celestial missile struck, the barograph, which is an instrument for measuring air pressure, registered an atmospheric wave, apparently produced by the swift passage of a great meteorite as it plunged downward through the air.

This was at 7 a. m., local time, June 30, 1908, but it is only recently that the place where the fall occurred has been found, in the midst of a vast primeval forest, in the region called Tayga, near latitude 60 degrees north, longitude 103 east, which is near the middle of Siberia, and inhabited by the Tunguses. These people reported that the fall was accompanied by an air wave which scorched and burnt the forest over many square miles, while in one place the River Ognia was dammed by the fall of its bordering cliffs.



Why Meteorites most frequently fall between Noon and Midnight.

The phenomena, according to them, succeeded one another in the following order: First, a bright light in the sky; second, a dark cloud; third, loud reverberations, three or four of which were particularly heavy. Then followed the fiery wave from an almost inaccessible place in the dense forest. In 1921 the Russian Academy of Science sent out an expedition which was unable to locate the place because of inaccessibility. But during the past year another expedition has been more successful, and according to reports received, it found the ground pitted over several square miles with holes recalling in appearance the crowded pittings visible with a telescope on many parts of the moon's surface. The explorers estimated that the total weight of all the fragments cannot be less than half a million tons.

The whole truth about this extraordinary occurrence will, no doubt, before long be disclosed. If the reports are fully confirmed it will take rank as the greatest known fall of meteorites that has occurred within human history.

There was a prehistoric occurrence of the kind, on perhaps a still greater scale, in Arizona, the only record of which is the famous Canyon Diablo crater. The immense meteoric masses from Greenland and elsewhere exhibited in our natural history museums show that such falls have often occurred in past ages, but whether they were more frequent formerly than now we cannot tell.

A question of fascinating interest concerns the origin of these iron and stone masses that come plunging upon the earth from without. Whether they can be associated with comets, as are ordinary "shooting stars," is doubtful. The most recent studies of their motions tend to indicate that most of them travel in hyperbolic orbits, having the sun as a focus. It appears also that the majority move in such a direction in space as to overtake the earth in its orbital motion. This not only reduces the velocity with which they enter the atmosphere, but has the interesting effect of causing them to be seen most frequently between the hours of noon and midnight and in the spring rather than in the fall. This relation is evident to the eye in the little sketch.

For Gold Star Mothers

THE House Military Affairs Committee did well when it unanimously favored the bill to enable Gold Star Mothers to visit American war cemeteries in Europe.

Both houses of the Congress should speed the bill with the same cordiality.

No debt of honor accruing from the war has quite the urgency of this. The graciousness of the measure outweighs its slight cost a thousand fold.

War's cruelest loss is levied upon the mother whose son is taken, never to return. Her's is an anguish supreme.

Since it was not feasible or wise to bring all our war dead home, the very least our rich nation can do in assuagement of maternal grief is to give the boon of a personal visit to the resting place where mother love makes a sublime shrine.

Welcome Instruction

DOES it anger you when some member of your family corrects your pronunciation or tells you of an error you make in construction?

Is it not better that a person in your own family circle should do this rather than an outsider?

If you make an error in speech in your home it is likely that you will make the same mistake when you are talking with those outside.

It is unfortunate that members of families are so undiplomatic in the manner of offering suggestions to home folk.

But even so, you can learn from them without the embarrassment you might experience if someone outside should correct you.

Often between husbands and wives, where one or the other is better educated, ill feeling comes when corrections are made.

But that is a poor way to reward a friendly act.

The better educated of the two should expect to help the other and do it in a kindly way.

Such instruction should be received thankfully and gratefully.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Sky

THE ancient sea can shrive the soul
Of all earth's sin and stain;
The sea-winds make the spirit whole,
The sea-song stills its pain.

But fisher-folk and sailors brown
And lords of high degree
Alone can leave the field and town
To seek the shining sea.

With joyous hearts their way they go
To greet the singing deep;
For some no endless ebb and flow
That lull to quiet sleep.

But, like the cup of God's own hand,
There shelters you and me
And every soul in every land
The sky's tranquillity!

New York Day by Day
by
O.O.McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A professor at Columbia sees a very low grade of intelligence among the ordinary run of humanity. We are, it appears, rather a hopeless lot of clods. Eighty per cent of us, he intimates, believe a couple of quinine pills and a stiff jolt of rye will cure a cold.

We believe lobster followed by ice cream will kink us up in a fatal agony; that all Swedes are thick skulled and stupid; that red-haired people are hot tempered; that dew falls; that tan shoes are cooler than black for summer wear, and that morals were purer 20 years ago.

Of course, everybody cannot be a college professor, but there are many men who believe a lot of nonsense and superstition who seem to get along fairly well, contributing a little more to the gross of human happiness than even some college professors. If that sounds catty, that is the intention.

One of New York's most prominent bankers and philanthropists, for instance, wears a horseshoe nail rheumatism ring. It is a relic of the days when he lived in an illiterate mountaineering country. He laughs at the superstition, but insists to wear the ring on a finger that assists in much coupon clipping, ha, ha.

And some of the shrewdest financiers in Wall Street refuse to transact portentous deals on Friday. A man who has given the world the finest art of the theater will, if he meets a cross-eyed person, sneak off some place and spit through his fingers.

A great anthropologist—who has written innumerable text books—was badgered by a friend to walk under a ladder for a hundred-dollar bill, and refused. Not even the great halls of learning could educate him out of a silly superstition.

Indeed, it would seem the greater the man the more likely he is to have some quirk that would rate his intelligence almost subnormal. Mental superiority is not salvaged from text books. America has rather definitely proved that men even in this age can be successful without education at all. And perhaps do as much to make the world happy as college professors.

A well-known magazine has pledged itself to avoidance of sex in fiction and articles in the future. It believes readers are fed up on secrets of the boudoir and there is an indication it is right in the tremendous circulation slump in those confession magazines that tell all. They raced up to enormous circulation figures a few years ago, and exploded recently with a bang.

Manufacturers of perfumes and other vanities for ladies have proved a boon to struggling musical revue producers this season. Many gorgeously staged skits, based around their products, have been featured. Ballet girls have appeared as powder puffs, show girls are costumed to represent delicately blown perfume bottles and such—and the only direct advertising is the name of the product listed on the program. As beautiful as they are, however, the advertising angle serves to lower the tone of a production. It is cheap stuff.

A celebrated author of a best seller was offered $50,000 to start off his tale with the central figure in the bathroom using a certain brand of safety razor. Instead his hero was introduced roaring drunk.

* * *

I asked a man who walks down Broadway every evening how many electric signs he could remember from the Circle to Times Square. He was only able to recall what products two of them advertised.

* * *

Yet almost every New Yorker remembers the first big electric sign display. It was a chariot race atop the old Hotel Normandie. It would not cause a stir today.

* * *

In the dim leer of a Broadway dawn, one of those night-hawk taxi's pulled up sharply in front of a hotel in West Forty-seventh street. A man and woman got out. As they teetered across the sidewalk, the driver called out: "Fine pair of shorts, keeping me out all nigh for a dollar tip." And he flung the change at their heads and shot away.

Ford's Publicity

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I attended the opening display of the new Ford cars. There was an enormous crowd, some 50,000 people.

There were all sorts and conditions of men, rich as well as poor, and they crowded about looking at the new car.

"Huccome Ford gets all this publicity?" said the dealer in a rival car to me. "I suppose it is because he has so much money and can pay for it."

That may be one of the reasons.

Ford has undoubtedly spent a great deal of money in advertising the new car. He has taken, so one of the Ford dealers informed me, a number of pages in every English-speaking daily in the United States. He spends money freely in the newspapers and therefore they consider him to be a welcome topic.

But there are other reasons than this. The principal reason lies in the fact that Ford is an interesting figure because he is so human.

Even Ford's faults endear him to the public. He made a mistake when he attacked the Jews, but his frank apology afterwards for this mistake was liked by the people, even the Jews.

Everybody makes mistakes and we somehow have a fondness for a person who acknowledges the corn.

His peace ship was not a very popular move, but the public recognized his good intentions and pardoned the folly of the enterprise on that account.

Altogether he is a dramatic figure. He has made a success of his business and the people like a successful man.

And he has made this business a success, not by hokum nor by anything injurious to the public. He has made a good car cheap. After all that may be said about the "tin Lizzie" it will run and it has proved a God-send to millions of people.

In the town where I live the distances are so great that everybody needs an automobile. Even plasterers and bricklayers cannot get to their work very easily without a car, and to put any kind of means of transportation at their disposal is a welcome gesture.

Any corporation finds the popularity of its head and his dramatic possibilities an asset. Gary was dramatic and so was John H. Patterson. They not only advertised freely in the newspapers, but they furnished good news items, and their concerns got a lot of free publicity in addition to that which was paid for.

Ford is a rich man, but there are other reasons besides his riches for the widespread interest in him.

He has always paid good wages and has benefited the public by his products.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON.

Hate a Boomerang

THIS is a true story.

Once upon a time, several people did me a wrong. No piffling little affair, a Regular Dirty Deal. So I hated them.

Now, as a Hater I was a steady, conscientious worker. I rose with the lark and hammered away at my hating job hour after hour, taking only fifteen minutes off for lunch. I never slowed up, I did not mind overtime. I loved my art.

Nor was I content with spending all my own time and strength on my Hate. I thought my friends should spend their time, too. I expected them to mobilize themselves immediately into a standing army for the execution of Revenge. So I rushed from one friend to the other, relating my grievances and expecting large gobs of sympathy and mob violence in return. I wrote letters to them. I hung on the phone. I neglected all my other work to carry on my hate campaign.

Which was most exhilarating for a while.

But, after a time, things began to go flat and I was forced to face an unpleasant fact. HATE WASN'T PAYING! It was, in fact, proving a total flop.

I was doing a record job of hating, but it wasn't getting me anywhere. My regular work, my disposition and my digestion were all shot to pieces. I hadn't had a hearty laugh in a month nor had I enjoyed a good book or a sunset or a quiet hour in front of the fire.

Moreover, in spite of the fact that I was the World's Most Piteous Victim my acquaintances were beginning to treat me as if I were the World's Greatest Pest. They ducked if they saw me coming. They had sudden emergency calls if I 'phoned. And, one and all, they refused to take sides in my feud.

Bitterest dose of all, my enemies were profiting by my hate:

THEY HAD HANDED ME ONE DIRTY DEAL, BUT I WAS HANDING MYSELF A CONTINUOUS DIRTY DEAL. I WAS DOING MORE HARM TO MYSELF BY PERPETUATING OUR QUARREL THAN THEY HAD HOPED TO DO IN THEIR MOST MALIGNANT DREAMS. THE HATE I WAS SENDING OUT WAS COMING BACK TO ME A THOUSAND-FOLD IN MENTAL DISTRESS, PHYSICAL ILLS AND SOCIAL UNPOPULARITY.

HATE WAS A BOOMERANG!

So I stopped hating. I stopped hating because I found it didn't pay. Maybe that motive won't win me any haloes in the hereafter, but it has certainly simplified my life in the present.
